A last name indicates they were not born as Kolodzey

Indicates the same family had a previous child with the same name (that died). The last known living is the normal shape.

This indicates the two persons are (or might be) twins. In this case, the family may have decided to change the name and re-baptize the child.

Also, because the godparents arranged baptisms (not the parents), this separate baptism may have been a result of twins with two different sets of godparents.

Indicates a known death or burial date for that person.

Dashed lines indicate a potential or suspected connection.

Solid lines indicate a known or sourced connection.

Lines with a single arrowhead indicates descendancy.

Lines with a double arrowheads indicate they are identical persons.

Same Godfather for all three. Conclusion:
Andreas + Catharina/Marianna = same parents for all three. Is Marianna the older sister (deceased by childbirth?) of Catharina?

The proximity of dates for baptism of Joannes and Franciscus (2 weeks) may lead to two conclusions: 1. they are twins and baptized two weeks apart, or, 2. Andreas and Catharina changed the name of their child and re-baptized Joannes as Franciscus.

Her doctor was right . . . she made it to 100th birthday

By JILL WENDLING
Of The Morning Call

Verna Griech used to laugh when her doctor would tell her "you'll live until 100." Little did she expect his prediction to come true.

But on Monday, the South Whitehall Township resident celebrated her 100th birthday.

She observed the occasion Sunday with a party attended by about 30 relatives.

The centenarian said she really doesn't know why she lived until 100, but attributed it partially to having a good home and working hard.

She said most of her life was spent raising her nine children and they are: Mrs. Irene Mades, with whom she's resided with for the past 34 years, Frank of Bethlehem, Andrew of Orefield, Albert of Allentown, Mrs. Catherine Smith of Maxatawny and John of Dalmatia. Daughters Anna and Mary did not survive past childhood and son Thomas died last year.

Although some older persons have problems with their hearing and vision, Mrs. Griech's is still in good health, allowing her to listen to polka music, read newspapers and magazines and watch television.

Before she had problems walking, she was an avid outdoor gardener. But she still manages to keep her fingers in the dirt by taking care of a few indoor plants which decorate her bedroom.

Born in Lendak, Czechoslovakia, the youngest of four daughters, she went into the work force at age 14 hand-rolling cigars. During that time, she received letters from her sister, the late Mary Bircsik, who immigrated to this country a few years earlier.

"Her sister wrote back and told her she should come over because it was a good country and that there were a lot more opportunities here than there," said Elaine Klucharich of Kutztown, one of her five grandchildren. Klucharich also said that her sister wanted a family member over in this country to keep her company.

At age 16, Griech made the decision to leave her mother and two sisters and make the three-week journey across the ocean. Although her father had died when she was younger and her mother was leery about letting her youngest leaving, her mother eventually relented and gave her permission.

Mrs. Griech said when she left her family she felt "frightened and saddened, but excited to come to a new country."

Upon arriving, she lived with her sister and husband Andrew in Ironwood, Mich. After living there for awhile, the three moved to Egypt where Griech worked as a weaver in a Copley silk mill.

While in Copley she met and eventually married Andrew Griech. Ironically, they were from the same town in Czechoslovakia and had met in Ironwood. By coincidence the two were introduced again in this area.

They were married for more than 32 years and lived in Fogelsville before he died in 1941.

Naturalized in 1937, Verna has never returned to her homeland and says she has never regretted the decision.
