

Telling People More: Growing Noun Phrase

Pies	are for sale.
The pies	are for sale.
All the pies	are for sale.
All the apple pies	are for sale.
Not quite all the apple pies	are for sale.
Not quite all the freshly baked apple pies	are for sale.
Not quite all the freshly baked apple pies on the rack	are for sale.
Not quite all the freshly baked apple pies on show on the rack	are for sale.
Not quite all the many handsome , freshly baked apple pies on show on the rack	are for sale.
Not quite all the many handsome, freshly baked home-made apple pies on show on the rack	are for sale.
Not quite all the many handsome, freshly baked home-made apple pies which Martin baked on show on the rack	are for sale.

which Martin baked is a clause (with a verb 'bake'), not a phrase.