

Silence

Silence is the greatest-power that has ever used by man

It brings out the Best we have in us and makes us strong of mind

It keeps us in a position where no one can understand.

It makes us a mystery to all the people around

It puts a shroud around us that no one can penetrate

It keeps the other guessing how much of life you know

They feel you are their master in the things that they would like to know

A man of Silence never speaks only when he has something to say.

oh yes he can tell a story or tell a joke you know.

But when it comes to life's principle he is careful what he says.

When he speaks he tells you something that you have never heard before and by the way he tells it you can see it so easy and clear he does not tell it in long stories. No he comes right out to the point he does not believe in Secretly if he can shorten the road.

He does not talk to position nor to please the ones who are there He cares not whether they believe him or know what. what he says is True He can sift the greatest Issues or see the world as it clings and read the lines of the future, but not by the palm of your hand.

Is the world that he sees through his vision and the things that he says will come True: for he sees evolution in it Principles and just ^{seem to} understand.

He does not tell the world what he sees and knows of the things that are coming upon they would brand him as a philosopher and condemn him to the force end?
