The Companion Promised Paradise

How would you feel if you were told that you have a beautiful palace waiting for you in Jannah? Well that's what happened to this famous companion of Prophet Muhammad (saw).

The Prophet Muhammad (saw) loved this companion very much. This companion was very loving toward the Prophet (saw), too. When he was upset and afraid after seeing the gigantic winged Angel Gabriel in the sky, the Prophet (saw) came to this companion for comfort. The companion covered him up and told him everything would be all right. This companion was very wealthy, too. She used her money to help the Prophet (saw).

Once, this companion was bringing a dish of food to the Prophet (saw). Angel Gabriel came to the Prophet (saw) and told him when the companion arrives, tell her that Allah has greeted her and tell her the good news that she has a palace made of jewels in Jannah.

You know who this companion is . . . don't you? It's our dear mother of the believers, Khadijah (ra).

A Famous Wife

Malcolm X was one of the most famous Muslims in America. He taught that Muslims are brothers and sisters of one another no matter what color they are. He also taught that all races of people should be treated fairly.

Malcolm X was killed shortly before turning 40 years old. His wife, Betty, was sadly left to raise their six daughters all on her own. Betty had been a devoted and loving wife to Malcolm X. Now, without him, she decided to imitate him and make a difference in the world.

Betty earned a PhD and began working to help other single mothers like herself. She worked with groups that spoke up against racism, too. Betty even started a scholarship program for people who wanted to become doctors. She encouraged them to take care of people who were poor and often treated unfairly. Betty Shabazz wasn't as famous as her husband, Malcolm X, but she worked hard, like him, to make this world a better place,
