Islamic militants held American citizens hostage in Iran for 444 days—until January 20, 1981. In this oil painting, artist Kartik Trivedi captured the joyous spirit of celebration when the former hostages visited the White House seven days later.

Persian
Iran

Yes, Persia officially changed its name to Iran in 1935. The decision was made by the government to emphasize the country's native name and identity.

Here's a brief overview:

- Persia was the name commonly used by Western countries for centuries.
- Iran is what the country has called itself in its native language, Farsi, which means "Land of the Aryans."
- In 1935, the Iranian government, under Reza Shah Pahlavi, requested that the international community refer to the country as Iran instead of Persia.

The billboard features a dramatic sunset sky with an American flag on the left and an airplane in flight. In the foreground, three silhouetted figures stand with their backs to the camera. The figure on the right is wearing a dark uniform with the letters "ICE" printed on the back. The billboard is mounted on a metal structure with several spotlights at the bottom.
