This Underused, Evergreen Shrub Is a Winter Gem

Paxistima canbyi 'Mountain Lover' is a low-growing, evergreen shrub that offers beautiful texture all year long. In the winter, its glossy, dark-green leaves take on purple hues in full sun.

Native to North America's Allegheny Mountains, Paxistima canbyi Mountain Lover has proven to be very adaptable to the West. It tolerates clay soil, alkaline soil and drought. It can handle our fluctuating winter temps.

This shrub also thrives in tricky spots, growing well under deciduous trees or in the challenging (and often not-so-pretty) canopy drip line of spruces and pines. Ideal for full sun to part shade.

Keep your eye out for this shrub next spring at The Flower Bin in Longmont, Colo. or on HighCountryGardens.com.

Get in the Holiday Spirit at Your Local Botanic Gardens

Put on your mittens, fill up on hot cocoa and head to your local botanic gardens for their holiday light displays! An evening visit is a great way to enjoy the season, while you support your local gardens during the winter.

Typically, tickets need to be bought in advance. Please visit your local botanic gardens' website for info and tickets.
