

Wild at Work: I want to work THERE!

Cultivating belonging. Celebrating the culture.

The Wild at Work approach digs into how organizations can cultivate the 'why' behind what they do, inviting people into something special, something important, something that matters. Coupled with a Wildly Welcoming culture, it creates an environment of belonging where people show up engaged, energized, and invested.

Through the antics of her sled dogs, lessons learned from decades of wilderness leadership, and a gift for drawing out and celebrating Wildness in all its forms, Chris invites organizations to resist the pull toward "business as usual" and explore what makes them distinct.

Whether your team is navigating change, rebuilding connection, addressing burnout, or fostering innovation and inclusion, Wild at Work offers a fresh and deeply human perspective on what's possible when people feel connected to purpose, each other, and the work they do together.

Participants Will:

- Discover what creates a culture people genuinely want to be part of.
- Learn how belonging fuels engagement, trust, and collaboration.
- Identify ways to strengthen connection to purpose, team, and organization.
- Explore practical approaches to creating a Wildly welcoming workplace.
- Leave inspired to cultivate a culture that brings out the best in people.

Participants will see culture for what it truly is: the difference between people merely showing up and fully showing up.

Keep it real. Stay agile. Stay Wild.
