Hi Babe!

16 Nov 91

It sure was good to talk to you tonight!
I probably wasn't home more than 5 minutes
when you called. Good timing.

Most of the trash is out at the curb now.
I was working on the cellar tonight. This guy was a pack rat. He even had engine oil (used) he saved in the cellar. There "was" empty paint cans, full paint cans (dried), hangers,
rags, old car parts, empty boxes, old tile, rusty nails and pedestals. - Just in the cellar! The yard included, but not limited to, lumber,
beer cans, lumber, beer cans, old screens, garbage
old carpet, rusted freezer, old frig, insulation, broken car parts, broken brick & block. This guy cried when he took out the trash. I'm sure he was trying to figure out a way to save it.

I'm glad there wasn't much garbage. I don't mind the debris but I hate the smell of spoiled garbage.

I guess the first order of business is complete. The next step is to get the kitchen up graded. The floor needs to be picked up and leveled. Then get the place & start with a new ceiling and paint.

So much to work! I was glad you called. It is always good to hear you are ok. Be careful walking on the trails.

I was thinking of our dinner last Saturday. We should have made love in the kitchen! I'm looking forward to you undressing me soon! I need to know what size ~~panties~~ pants you wear. I am going to buy a sexy pair for you.

I laying here on the brass bed. It is in terrible shape. It needs a good shinning w/ some Beano. When I polish the bed it takes about 4 hours to complete. It looks great when done, but finger prints show up in a couple of days.

I am going to read some more of Peter the Great. I miss you a lot.
Do well & win the war.
