

MORNING WATCH

for the week of March 20, 2022

Take Care of each other.

It seems the whole world is critical of the Internet--Well maybe of social media mostly. We all seem to be very critical in general. I wonder why any of us feels the need and even the qualifications to criticize? I remember in college having to do a speech on “criticism” and also on “comparison” Preparing for those speeches was enlightening to me. It was clear to me that in our daily lives both of those words have come to be perceived as negative in nature and they neither one are intended to be so.

For the most part I enjoy Facebook. ...and surely the Internet is amazing! Indeed, Facebook deserves criticism, but it has some positive features. For instance, it offers a platform for showcasing our talents and our individuality and if we look at it openly it offers a basis for “understanding”. For instance, I have (specifically) two “friends” who regularly each submit a bit of themselves for all to criticize and compare and perhaps understand. Both of these friends are extremely talented. Both are free to share abundantly of that talent. I have no such talent as these two, but I am quick to admire their talents. One offers a comedic view of the world via her own unique art and the other delights us all with her musical ability. I am sure, tho, that there are some who criticize both of these people in a very negative manner. I let it add to my life. Closing each session one of my friends always says, “Take care of each other.”

What a lovely thought. Think about it. If we all just cared enough about each other to adhere to this the world would not be in the shape it is today.

Take care of each other.

Change the world
