

MORNING WATCH

for the week of March 6, 2022

Encourage each other.

As I start to write this morning watch, it occurs to me that this particular Morning Watch could easily be a Theme for an entire camp week. It also occurs to me that it is one thing that we have been the most successful with for all of CAMP's existence.

I noticed it early on in CAMP's life--on talent night especially. Campers have always been so supportive of one another--both to performers who are especially talented and also, and especially, to ones who are struggling. We also see this encouraging one another all through the week as well.--Again when someone, for instance, has made an especially creative craft, the other campers are the first to be especially complimentary, and by the same token if the kid is really "just not getting it", someone is there to show them where they went wrong and encourage them that they can do it!--and keeping the struggling crafter from feeling like a failure.

Encouraging one another is something we all do well at CAMP. You know it is at those times that we truly are able to --as Jesus commanded "Love one another as I have loved you." Encouraging is a true form of Loving.

Jesus encourages us and points us in the right way if we listen and accept His help, and so also must we accept the help and encouragement that our fellow campers offer. - and you know we all are just fellow campers here in this lifetime, just camping out here learning the lessons we're supposed to. One of the really big lessons:

Encourage one another.
