

Jean Lee (2024)

May 8, 2024: The Washingtons and the Many Worlds of Mt. Vernon

Jean B. Lee received her Ph.D. at the University of Virginia and is now Professor of History, Emerita, at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her research specialty is the American Revolution, with emphasis on how members of the revolutionary generation — people from all walks of life — experienced, gave meaning to, and remembered the founding of a new and ambitiously experimental nation. After retiring from UW-Madison, Jean moved to Pennsylvania to be near family. A son teaches at Penn State, his wife is an administrator in the PSU Law School, and her daughter and grandson complete the family circle in State College.
