Lady of the Night or Queen of the Night
Georgina was out at 10:30 pm to snap this picture of her Ephyllum, night blooming cactus. These beauties bloom for one night only...then wither by morning. If you sneak up on it before sun up, you'll catch a fragrant whiff and see it in full bloom. It is easy to propagate so bring in some cuttings to share.

It's Time to Plant
Our own Steve Tognoli will be giving a talk at our September meeting on starting tomatoes from seed. Bring in any vegetable seeds or plants to share.

Gardening has no failure only lessons that are learned

What's blooming in Nilda's Garden?

Nilda has some beautiful flowers & plants that she has shared with the garden club. The framed photos below look too good to be real. Nilda's garden features orchids hanging from her trees in the front yard, succulents in her patio, and the magnificent queen's wreath over her garden gate.
