Indian Blanket
(Gaillardia pulchella) is a good choice for zone 11. It is drought tolerant, takes the full sun and blooms all summer. Treat this like an annual. Its available at local nurseries.

Lady of the Night (Brunfelsia americana) This is a small bush that grows 4-6 feet tall. These tube-like flowers give off a beautiful fragrance at night. It is easy to grow. Give it a sunny to part sunny location. It blooms repeatedly throughout the year and is blooming now.

What would you like to see spotlighted in our Newsletter? We are here to share our knowledge with each other. It's been an unusual year without having our regular monthly meetings, but we can still answer your questions and discuss in our newsletter plants that interest our members. Tell us what you want to learn about.

We miss seeing our friends and fellow gardeners. It's a beautiful thing to be part of an organization that places all its energy in sharing knowledge, plants, and friendship. We wish all our members good health and happy gardening.

To plant a garden is to believe in tomorrow.

Happy Birthday
Debra Elliott, Karen Leslie, and Linda Marsicano

Philodendrons – The plant that keeps on giving the lush greenery to the garden. Philodendrons are in the aroid family, Araceae. There are two types, self-heading, and trailing vines. They come in different colors and sizes. And are easy to propagate from cuttings and division. Most are grown in the shade. Handle carefully as the juice from the stems can irritate the skin. These plants are so common that we tend to forget the beauty and tropical feel they can add to any garden.

Philodendron Red Emerald

Has deep new red leaves and stems, and with age, the leaves turn dark green. Loves to grow up trees.

Philodendrom Cordatum Neon- heart shaped, trailing vine with yellow green leaves.

With over 489 varieties give them a try!

Philodendron Burle Marx –

It makes a nice border or ground cover – up to 2' tall.

Philodendron Selloum

Makes a dramatic tropical statement when used in the landscaping. Its tree like trunk can be 4' high and spread 8 to 10 feet. This one can take some sun.

Philodendron Xanadu

One of the most forgiving of the species. It has glossy green leaves, deeply lobed and grows to 5' high.
