This song was not outright terrible but to be completely honest it felt pretty undeveloped as it currently stands. Things just sounded thin with the light drum roll, I'd like to see a few more layers of sound with some different instruments to fully expand on this.

Really like all of the different elements in the melody, really strange and yet engaging reminds me of EDM beats. I feel like at any moment the beat will drop. Really like the beat build up I wish it was heavier with the base but overall pleasant and lively.

The flow and beats of this song bringing peace to mind and able to concentrate on work without any distraction, want to hear this song again to come of stress and remembering my old memories which I spent with my family and friends.

I like those staccato beats! The song is more hypnotic than repetitive and I liked the handclaps, the abrupt changes, and what sounded as though they could turn into vocals but never did.

There's not much energy to this track. It's really repetitive too, even for an electronic song. I wouldn't want this in a video game let alone to listen to on my own.

This is an alright and decent song for the most part. The instrumental establishes the atmosphere, beat and energy, the quality is decent, same with the structure.

The song had a good beat and drew me in at first. But it felt like the beat just kept building and building towards a more interesting section that never came.

I really like the tempo and energy of this track. It has a great beat for dance and movement. The music is repetitive and becomes irritating as it continues.

I loved all the unique instruments. The xylophone especially sounded amazing with the beat. The drums also were nice and I liked how groovy they were.

I like how the kick gives the song an electronic dance drive & sound. I love how cowbell percussion brings a distinctive feel to the track.

I'm not sure what kind of percussion the song started with but I really dug it. Gave the song a really high energy vibe right off the bat.

The beat of the track is unique to me here, I love the banger atmosphere of the track though for an EDM clip here, it sounds unique to me.
