

A BICYCLE BUILT FOR HULLABALOO

You and _____ want to go for a _____ on your tandem bicycle in the (a famous person) (verb)

_____ summer weather. You decide to go to the library to return the _____ (adjective) (plural noun)

you read and get new ones. For safety, you both strap on _____ to your _____ (plural noun) (plural body parts) and hop on the bicycle. At first, things go _____ ! You are _____ at tremendous (adverb) (ing verb)

speed! But then, your front _____ goes flat and you lose control. You are careening (noun)

towards a crosswalk and a _____ is right in your path, when you remember your (animal)

_____ ! Screeching to a halt, the _____ scurries safely across the road. You (plural noun) (same animal)

patch your tire with some _____ and begin to _____ toward the library again.
(sticky noun) (action verb)

For some reason, peddling seems much harder this time. You are dripping _____ , and (liquid)

become short of _____. You wonder what could be the problem, and then you turn around. _____ has decided she/he/they no longer wants to pull their weight on this ride.
(noun)

(same famous person)

He/she/they has he/she/their _____ up and is/are _____ one of your library (body part) (ing verb)

books! _____ ! Thankfully, when you arrive at the library, you see _____ , your (Exclamation) (name of your best friend)

best friend! What luck! After returning your books, selecting new ones, and checking your Summer

Reading Record, you ditch _____ and head towards (same famous person)

your local _____ restaurant with your bestie, who (type of food)

peddles the entire way.