The Return of Servant Leadership

SPECIAL ELECTION EDITION PAGE 10

Christianity and politics...the new reality

What has changed in the last decade that justifies Christianity, the Church, to actively get involved in politics?

One answer is, just about everything, and to be specific, the emergence of unmitigated evil over the land. It wasn't as though there was never evil in our country; it was just never on the scale we are seeing it today. The question then is, what would Jesus do? And the answer to that question is nothing more than common sense and the conscience of every believer. Votes are what determine the outcome of elections and if Christians don't vote, evil will prevail.

The traditional Christian view has been to keep politics out of the Church.

The fact is, the two have now intersected with each other and the Church is divided and confused, but it has never been clearer what to do about it. The issue has become what is Church business, and what is the business of politics? In both instances it is doing what is right. See article by Richard Bailey on PAGE 15

Getting Christians to Vote is Key in California

Christians who choose not to vote have created a mess. California is a one-party state. It shows.

By: Richard Bailey:

California has a crumbling infrastructure. Its water system, once the envy of the world, is being dismantled. Ditto to schools. It has the highest poverty rate in the nation. Based on rate of incarceration, California looks like the Alabama of 1870. California leads the nation in income disparity. Its economy features exploiting noncitizens through human labor trafficking, offshoring jobs and wage suppression. Its forests burn. Voters can no longer count on free and uncorrupted elections.

“Rendering unto Caesar” includes participating in the life of the community. That means paying taxes, obeying the law, serving on juries and in the military and, most significantly, voting. Christians who don’t vote ought to view themselves as responsible for California’s decline from Golden to Third World State. School kids suffer. Those in poverty and the homeless suffer. Families suffer. Unborn children never have a chance to live. The State’s forests burn. Those who can, leave.

In 2015, Senator Ted Cruz said, “There are 90 million evangelical Christians in the United States, it’s about 30 percent of our population. In the last election, 54 million evangelical Christians stayed home. If Christians will simply show up and vote our values, we’ll turn this country around.”

He went further, “The message my father conveys to pastors is that we have too many pastors hiding behind the pulpit who are afraid to preach the word of God, who are afraid to say to Christians, we have a scriptural obligation to be salt in the light, we have a scriptural obligation to be watchmen on the wall, and every one of us has a responsibility to be engaged in our public life, voting our values.”

In 2018, Pastor Franklin Graham put it bluntly when he described the class that calls the political shots on today’s west coast. “Progressive?” he said, “That’s just another word for godless.”

According to the Pew Research Center, Christians make up almost two thirds of California residents. Nationwide, an estimated 25 million Christians don’t vote in presidential elections. 65 million do not participate in local elections. 15 million are not registered voters. California includes about ten percent of the nation’s Christians. Working it out, if California Christians follow the national trend, over two million California Christians will sit out the 2020 presidential election. Six and a half million will fail to vote in the next round of local elections. One point five million aren’t even registered to vote.

If even a small portion of Christians who now sit on the sidelines got involved, the state would be transformed.

In June of 2019, David Clausen of the Family Research Counsel, put it this way,

“It is no surprise that withdrawing from the political process has become a temptation for many Christians. . . . Do we really need to get involved in the messy world of politics?” His answer. Yes, it is. “Engaging in politics,” he writes, “is not only unavoidable, it is also an opportunity to obey God and show love to our neighbors. American Christians, with our right to vote, have a unique opportunity and duty to affect the political process.”

portunity and duty to affect the political process.”

Dran Reese, of the Salt and Light Counsel, is on a mission to develop Biblical voters. “Christians,” she writes, “have written platforms on what they believe. This is called the Bible.” Other voters rely on their own platforms. Low information voters listen to the media and “parrot what they say.” Her guide suggests “Breaking free to become a true Biblical Citizen is to take your Biblical knowledge . . . and align to the party that most represents your faith and values.”

Getting Christians to vote is possible. It is a necessary step in moving California out of its political dead-end.

Explains Voter Fraud

1. The right to vote in a free and fair election is the most basic civil right, one on which many other rights of the American people depend.

2. Congress and the states should guarantee that every eligible individual is able to vote and that no one's vote is stolen or diluted.

3. Voter fraud is real and hundreds of convictions have been made and documented.

Preserving the great experiment that is the American republic is dependent upon free and fair elections. When selecting a city councilor or the president of the United States, every American must be able to trust the process and the result, or the democratic system itself breaks down.

Election integrity is essential and the security of the ballot box cannot be left to a simple honor system.. It is incumbent upon state governments to safeguard the electoral process, and ensure that every voter's right to cast a ballot is protected.

The history of voting in the United States

Contrary to the claims of many liberals, the problem of voter fraud is as old as the country itself. As the U.S. Supreme Court noted when it upheld Indiana's voter identification law, "flagrant examples" of voter fraud "have been documented throughout this Nation's history by respected historians and journalists."

Attempts to commandeer election results have been documented dating back to the 19th century, when New York City's infamous Tammany Hall was synonymous with political corruption and election fraud. In one New York election 1844, 55,000 votes were recorded even though there were only 41,000 eligible voters. Decades later, these efforts have continued and determined fraudsters have become only more creative in their efforts to fix the outcome of elections.

Can illegal votes actually affect election outcomes?

Liberal groups often claim that known instances of voter fraud are inconsequential when compared to the total number of ballots cast in American elections. However, as the National Commission on Federal Election Reform has stated, the problem "is not the magnitude of voter fraud. In close or disputed elections, and there are many, a small amount of fraud could make the margin of difference." The U.S. Supreme Court has concurred with this assessment, noting that known instances of fraud "demonstrate that not only is the risk of voter fraud real but that it could affect the outcome of a close election."

God's Hand Over History

There is a direct line that runs from Jesus's life on earth to the present. For the last 2,000 years – science, the arts, business, government, education – have been inspired by the belief that, “God's Son is the hinge on which the door of history turns.” Today, Western Civilization is becoming increasingly secular

Many people don't understand the impact of Judeo-Christian principles on world history. Simply put, the church is the glue that holds society together.

The mighty Roman Empire became officially Christian under Emperor Constantine in AD 325. Most previous emperors persecuted Christians, but Constantine recognized the value of Christians bringing light to civilization. He convened the Council of Nicaea which brought Christian leaders together to write a document that described the relationship between God, His Son and mankind.

Before Christianity, infanticide, slavery, and even human sacrifice created an attitude that life is cheap. Today as well, many of those who have no faith believe that life is expendable. In contrast, those with genuine faith are committed to preserving and protecting life. Hospitals, orphanages, and compassionate ministries were founded by Christians living out their faith by helping others – because of their belief that life is sacred. A basic belief of Christianity is that every person has worth and a unique creative ability.

Architects in the Middle Ages, influenced by the life of Christ, designed majestic cathedrals for the purpose of honoring God. The first universities in the 12th and 13th centuries were established by Christians so that students could explore the sciences, literature, and the arts from a biblical perspective. C.S. Lewis said, “Men became scientific because they expected law in nature, and they expected law in nature because they believed in the Lawgiver.” Newton, Galileo, and numerous scientists believed that nature has order, and that God is the Designer of that order. Faith in God and freedom to worship inspired a small group of Pilgrims to begin a new life in a new land. They wrote a short remarkable document called the Mayflower Compact which stated in simple legal terms their belief in individual liberty and self-government based on the Bible.

In the 1740's, about 100 years after the Pilgrims landed, George Whitfield and other pastors led the First Great Awakening which encouraged Christians to become more serious about their faith. This time of revival caused our Founders – men such as Washington, Adams, Jefferson, and Franklin to influence the writing some of the most important documents in history – the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. Both documents were based on principle's found in the Bible.

The value of every human life and the idea that all people are created equal inspired the abolitionist movement in the 1700's and 1800's. John Wesley and William Wilberforce led the effort to end slavery in England. The American Second Great Awakening in the 1830's produced a passion to end slavery in America. Individuals and many churches assisted the Underground Railroad by helping lead escaped slaves to freedom.

In the 1800's and 1900's a very large number of churches and other faith-based organizations

“ Charles Finney was one of many traveling preachers who spoke to the Pioneers. His passion to abolish slavery encouraged Christians to become active in politics. Finney said, “God will bless or curse a nation according to the role that Christians take in politics.” ”

Many people responded! In fact, a new political Party was born in 1854, primarily to end slavery. This Republican Party and its leader, President Abraham Lincoln, freed the slaves with the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863.

Christianity led Americans to understand the biblical concept that the people are the ultimate leaders of our government. The Founders recognized that everyone has a sin nature and therefore they designed a system of checks and balances to prevent a monarchy or dictatorship. They knew that representative government, allowing people to vote, would prevent having leaders with unchecked power. Lincoln said, “We have a government of the people, by the people and for the people.” Also, the Founders earnestly believed that a government which increases in size decreases freedom.

cared for the poor and the needy. Government assistance in the form of welfare did not begin until 1933. Before that time, for over 300 years, from 1620 to 1933, it was churches and private organizations which helped the poor and needy get jobs and succeed in life. In more modern times, the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs Wade ruling spawned the nationwide Pro-Life movement. This movement, led by people of faith, was particularly instrumental in the election of President Ronald Reagan. While in office he wrote a book called, ‘Abortion and the Conscience of a Nation’ which is an excellent defense of the Sanctity of Life.

Every person desires their life to have value and meaning. An understanding of God's hand over history gives us hope that He is in control and that individuals and nations will thrive when we honor God. History shows that Judeo-Christian principles have dramatically influenced our nation. America and other nations are desperately in need of another Great Awakening. As we watch our culture fracturing, we can be hopeful by looking at the past and following the example of those who have faced similar perilous times and have prevailed.

It is encouraging to see the large number of Christians and others in this country who recognize the seriousness of the current battle – to protect America's constitutional freedoms from a highly organized effort to rule our country by godless, Marxist principles. The battle is very real and the time for all of us to stand up is now. If our principles are replaced by the loss of individual rights our country will be unrecognizable. We must stop the world that the Leftist agenda is building for us. Citizens of faith can push back against evil by speaking out, volunteering, and by voting for candidates who will fight for our freedoms and legislate wisely. Most importantly, we must heed Abraham Lincoln's advice, “I'm not concerned that God is on our side, I'm concerned that I'm on God's side.” God's hand has always been for Freedom

“Woke” Thinking Has Infiltrated the Church at Higher Levels Than You Think

Since its beginnings in the first century, the church has faced varied resistance from the surrounding culture and challenges to the gospel. Recently, a new challenge has emerged: “wokeness,” or the state of being “woke.”

Merriam-Webster identifies “woke” as a slang term meaning being “aware of and actively attentive to important facts and issues (especially issues of racial and social justice).” On the surface, wokeness might sound like seeking justice and showing concern for the weak and oppressed—things the Bible urges us to do (Isa. 1:17, Micah 6:8).

However, wokeness often embraces theories and ideologies inconsistent with or even hostile to the Bible. Many well-intentioned Christians—out of a desire to be compassionate, accepting, and loving—are succumbing to cultural pressure to conform to woke ideology, likely unaware of its unbiblical tendencies.

To help Christians think biblically about wokeness, Owen Strachan, FRC’s (Family Research Council) Senior Fellow for Biblical Worldview, has written a new book, Christianity and Wokeness: How the Social Justice Movement Is Hijacking the Gospel. In the book, Strachan walks through the history of woke ideology and examines its consequences in American culture and the church. He also consults Scripture to give Christians advice for responding to the woke movement.

Wokeness in the Culture and the Church

The first two chapters of Christianity and Wokeness examine how woke ideology is entering the culture and, more consequentially, the church. According to Strachan, “wokeness” actively incorporating woke ideology into their institutions and practices. Strachan observes that some Christians have started apologizing for and repenting of their “whiteness.” Often these actions are prefaced with the proposal that we should change the gospel to fit with woke ideology so that brothers and sisters of color will be more comfortable in the church. While true racial reconciliation is an important out-

“White people should be less white.”

means to be “awake” and in tune with the prevailing zeitgeist. Critical Race Theory (CRT), which sees society as an intentional system of power structures meant to oppress others based on their skin color, is currently the most well-known example of woke ideology. CRT purports that “White Privilege” is at the root of social justice issues and must be eradicated.

The 21st century American church has been both passively and working of the gospel (Eph. 2), wokeness changes the gospel by teaching that white people are never able to fully repent for their actions because they are inherently racist by nature of being white. But the gospel says all have sinned, and everyone can be fully redeemed through the work of Christ. With its different view of sin and redemption, wokeness undermines the gospel. This is why Strachan argues, “[W]okeness is not a prism by which we discover truths we couldn’t see in a Christian worldview. Wokeness is a different system entirely than Christianity. It is, in fact, ‘a different gospel.’ But it is not just that. In the final evaluation, wokeness is not just not the Gospel. Wokeness is anti-Gospel.”

Why is Wokeness an Ungodly System?

In chapters three and four, Strachan outlines his concern with the theological and cultural implications of CRT and woke ideology. First, he encourages believers to guard their hearts and minds, noting the apostle Paul’s admonition not to be taken captive by false philosophies (Col. 2:8). Strachan argues that wokeness represents a man-centered gospel that takes others captive through legalism rather than setting them free in the grace of Christ. In other words, wokeness says that only your works can save you—but you can never actually accumulate enough works to satisfy its requirements. Ultimately, this philosophy promises so much, only to abandon its followers in the end.

Furthermore, Strachan provides guidance for responding to unbiblical ideologies. According to Strachan, wokeness calls into question the sovereignty of God and contradicts Scripture by saying that the root of all evil is “whiteness.” But, as Strachan explains, “[in] biblical terms, ‘white’ skin is not our biggest problem. Sin is.” He goes on to say, “If you have been convicted and demeaned for your skin color or heritage (whatever each may be), you have been wronged.” Woke ideology turns humans against one another, and results in individuals being judged by the color of their skin and status in society rather than the content of their character or their status in the eyes of God.

The Bible and Ethnicity

Because questions of race and ethnicity are so closely tied to woke ideology and CRT, chapter five and six provide an in-depth study of what the Old and New Testament have to say about our identity as human beings. Strachan explains how Genesis teaches that all humans are equally part of one human race. Although we may have different skin tones, languages, or ethnicities that distinguish us, we are all human beings who are made in the image of God (Gen. 1:26-27).

Further, the doctrine of the fall—not CRT—explains the fractured relationships present in humanity.

It is not the differences between our skin colors that make us misunderstand, betray, and abuse one another but the sin that infects us all.

One tragic consequence of the fall is the sin of racism, which is one way that humans wrongly show partiality. God is not elitist and shows no partiality to anyone, as the apostle Paul frequently discusses in his letters (Rom. 2:11, 10:12; Gal. 2:6, Eph. 6:9). The New Testament also demonstrates how everyone can be united and reconciled in Christ through the gospel message (Eph. 2:14-18, 2 Cor. 5:16-21). God desires that, ultimately, every tribe, tongue, and language be united in Christ to form the household of God (Eph. 2:19; Rev. 5:9-10, 7:9, 21:3). As Strachan explains, “Distinctiveness is no bad thing and is, in truth, a gift and blessing of God—but unity will be our song in all the ages to come.”

The Response to Wokeness

The final chapter of Strachan’s book considers the reality of American history, specifically slavery and the civil rights movement. He concludes with recommendations for how Christians can respond to woke ideology in a biblical way, reminding his readers: “We cannot fall silent. We cannot stand by as people around us are taken captive by wokeness or any ungodly ideology.”

Although Christians ought to recognize racism’s sinfulness and the necessity of repentance for racist thoughts, actions, and attitudes, they should also recognize that certain groups of people are not inherently racist simply because of the color of their skin. Strachan concludes, “Wokeness is advancing far too quickly to treat this matter lightly, or to assume that these issues will simply ‘go away.’” He reminds his readers, “No—they will not go away. As we have argued throughout the book, strongholds and false ideologies must be destroyed, not ignored or treated with a softshoe approach.”

May we all heed this timely warning and put on the full armor of God (Eph. 6:10-17) to stand firm against all unbiblical ideologies in our day and proclaim the gospel of truth.

Our mission is to protect black life from conception to death by confronting injustice and...

Neil Mammen

Our cities are on fire, our citizens are under attack, our houses of worship are being raided and the livelihoods of inner-city Blacks are being destroyed.

Even statues of escaped slave Frederick Douglass and abolitionists Hans Christian Heg are torn down. At the root of this disruption is Black Lives Matters.

Yet, ever since Black Lives Matters was founded, many of our cities, corporations and even churches and Christians have jumped on the BLM bandwagon. With the "Silence is Violence" campaign, those who are not Black, desirous of not being seen as racists have in many cases been compelled to give BLM lip service under the mistaken impression that if they don't, it signals that they are racists. Worse the very act of claiming you are not a racist is now a sign of "White Fragility" and used to prove that you are indeed a racist.

Yet, any Christian will, upon reading BLM's principles and listening to BLM's founders, realize that the goals and purposes of BLM are un-Godly.

For instance: BLM is against God's standards of sexuality.

BLM is against God's standards of family.

BLM is against God's standards of personal property (BLM has Marxist roots).

BLM is against God's standards for fatherhood, which is one of the major causes of poverty, crime and high murder rates in the inner city.

BLM is against God's standard of equality as they strive to put a wedge between the different ethnicities, by trying to pit one group of people against another. They seek to elevate African Americans over others which can only result in resentment and the recruiting of weaker Americans into white extremist groups as a gut level reaction to BLM. They also blame people by virtue of the color of their skin, for the sins of evil men and women from the past. They will set "race" relationships back decades and create counter movements.

BLM is against God (as they proclaim their atheistic Marxist roots).

BLM focusses on police brutality and ignores the two major causes of death; gang violence and abortion.

BLM is against God's standard of Life.

"We deserve and thus we demand reproductive justice [i.e., abortion] that gives us autonomy over our bodies..."

36% of all African Americans have been killed in the womb.² That they would call the greatest genocide of African Americans any sort of Justice, should concern all Christians or any person of conscience, regardless of color.

Corporations jump on board to their detriment

Corporations fearing attack or boycotting are also compelled to jump on board. Yet if you understand the BLM founder's Marxist positions³, corporations like Starbucks, the NBA and Apple should realize that by donating to BLM they are funding an attack on their very existence.

There is no free market in Marxism. Appeasement only means the crocodile eats you last.

But is there an alternative?

and to create ministries to disciple young Black men and women.

5. They will train cities on how to instruct their police to handle the disparate

“ For years there hasn't been a choice, but finally the Frederick Douglass Foundation and God-fearing individuals have created a Biblical alternative. It's called Every Black Life Matters. EBLM is against Marxism, against breaking up the family, against atheism and most of all they are against abortion as clearly depicted in their logo. ”

EBLM's goal is to educate Cities, Corporations, Churches and Christians on the real reason why African American communities are economically behind, then deliver solutions.

They will work with legislators to:

1. Change welfare, to stop it from rewarding the separation of fathers from their children.
2. Push for school choice to save inner city kids from failing schools.
3. Work with corporations to, rather than sending money to BLM, to send business leaders to train our young black men to become entrepreneurs.
4. Work with churches to start focusing on character training and vocational skill classes tendencies to see all young black men as dangerous as well as train young Black men to engage with police safely while retaining their dignity and earning respect (vs demanding it)

6. They will hold police, City, Corporation and Church training, teaching about the dangers of Critical Race Theory and the bankruptcy of "White Fragility", while teaching citizens how to fight for legislation that builds up the African American family rather than destroy it.

7. But most of all, they will keep the plight of our inner-city youth and the grievous loss of life squarely on the shoulders of those who have created it, mayors and governors who push socialistic policies to keep their citizenry dependent.

8. Stop the Genocide of black babies in the womb.

But why only Black lives?

All lives matter, but the beauty of co-opting part of BLM's phrase, is that as a non-racist, you can go one step further. Now rather than saying "All Lives Matter" which they will cry foul about, you say not only do "Black Lives Matter" BUT "EVERY Black Life matters." We just upped the ante.

We care about the black lives in the womb as well as the black lives in the inner city as well as the black lives who aren't getting an education as well as the black lives who need a father as well as the black lives of the store owner (whose business was burned down) as well as the black lives of the police officers.

Every Black Life Matters to me. Why does it not matter to you?

We Christians were the first to address the injustice of slavery and racism, it is now time for us to address the injustice of Marxist principles, lack of school choice, the breakups of the family and Black genocide that will destroy Black families completely. We must act fast.

As a representative for National Write Your Congressman and a passionate evangelist I have a keen awareness of the need to exercise our first amendment rights. The first amendment is first for good reason!

It is this first freedom that enables us as citizens of America to exercise our faith, share our faith and speak up for what is true and best for our nation!

National Write Your Congressman enables citizens to be engaged, speak up and hold Congress accountable. Our legislative research team, the technology in our app and our website empowers “we the people” to influence Congress for better legislation. We have become the largest single source of direct constituent mail going into Washington DC. Along with the American people we’re having an impact! We must take a stand and express ourselves freely to preserve our constitutional rights and more importantly expand God’s kingdom through the proclamation of the gospel.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe! There is a saying that has been wrongly attributed to Saint Francis of Assisi. That saying is: “preach the gospel always and only use words when necessary”. This saying is incorrect because the gospel is a message about a person. That person is the Lord Jesus Christ who died on the cross for our sins, rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, poured out his Holy Spirit and is expected to soon return to judge the wicked and reward the righteous. The gospel message contains words that need to be spoken. Yes, we should be the nicest people on earth, but our niceness is not what saves people. Jesus did not say go out in the world and be nice. He said go out into the world and proclaim the gospel to every creature!

If you would like to join in with responsible Americans to fight to preserve our freedoms, especially our first amendment right to express our faith in the public square, please contact me. It's clear that the people of this state and this nation do not want any more career politicians in government. We want people who truly know this state and have experience in what makes our state the world's fifth largest economy.

Having been born and raised in Los Angeles and spending much of my personal and professional life in the Central Valley I embody just that. Being Vice President of Zacky Farms, I understand the diverse needs of California, its businesses, and its short comings. I know what it takes and how to give California what it needs to flourish. Having been a board member of the California Poultry Federation, I have experienced firsthand the incompetence, selfishness, and corruption of people in power. We are all witness to their failure. It is up to all of us to take a stand and make the change we want to see in California. I seek office not for fame or fortune, or special privileges, but because I know no one else is more capable, incorruptible, and committed to fixing California. I have solutions to drought, homelessness, wildfires, and cost of living. I will bring left and right together to tackle our challenges and set us up to be prepared for the future. This is not about democrats or republicans;

this is about California. We're all in this together. We're all on the same team, Team California! We must work together to accomplish this goal.

California has a whole host of issues and Leo Zacky has detailed common-sense and cost-effective solutions to solving them.

“Ending the drought will require the building of reservoirs throughout the state for rain and at the high altitudes to capture the snow-pack.”

We must also upgrade our existing infrastructure so we can hold more water and prevent another Oroville incident. We must also invest in desalin-ization to take the pressure off our inland reserves. My long-term vision is to make California a water exporter where we will sell water to Nevada, Arizona, and Mexico bringing an additional revenue stream into the state that is not from taxpayers' pockets. Leo Zacky is solidifying his conservative base while winning over the moderate and even liberal democrats with his solution-based campaign and is on track to go head-to-head with Gavin Newsom on the November Ballot. However, nothing is certain in times of rampant corruption and it is up to you to get involved and cast your vote. Do not feel discouraged, demoralized, or too small to make a difference! Freedom for the whole world rides on this election in California, as California goes so does the nation and with that the world. Make sure you vote on June 7th and get your friends, family, and churches out to vote too.

California's 22nd Congressional District
(special general election)

Congressional candidate Connie is a lifelong Valley resident, wife, mother, and public servant. During her years as a Tulare County Supervisor, Republican legislator, and appointee of President Donald Trump, Connie Conway put the "C" in conservative.

Born in Kern County, Connie and her family moved to Tulare County when she was a child. Growing up, her father John "Bob" Conway served as a local County Supervisor. She went to San Joaquin Memorial High School and upon graduation she attended Fresno State. She learned the value of hard work as a substitute teacher working in the healthcare field, and for the local newspaper. But she never forgot the years of watching her father serve the community, and decided to follow in his footsteps.

In 2000 Connie ran for the Tulare Board of Supervisors and won. There, she was known as a strong proponent of taxpayers and our local agriculture. She helped to balance every county budget and improve services – without raising taxes. She also got her first experience fighting with Sacramento liberals to defend our dairy jobs and water.

After a few years Connie realized the Sacramento liberals weren't going to give up, and they weren't going away, so she ran for State Assembly and won. In the Assembly, Conway served as Republican leader where she fought against Democrat attempts to raise taxes on an already hard-pressed middle class. She helped set up a Rainy Day fund, so that the state would have money in bad times as well as good. She worked to pass a state-wide water initiative so that our agricultural jobs could grow.

In 2019 President Trump appointed Connie to serve as the California Executive Director of the United States Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency.

While working for President Trump, Connie helped distribute critical funding to keep farms alive through the trade war with China and the global shutdowns.

Conway led the nation's largest Farm Service Agency by administering more than $100 million in safety net and disaster relief programs serving California farmers, ranchers, foresters, and agricultural producers.

By: Richard Bailey:

Back in 2016 a promotional interview for the movie, Fences, Denzel Washington describes three framed images found in millions of late 20th century American kitchens: John Kennedy, Jesus Christ and Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr. The images were usually hung with Kennedy to the left of Jesus and MLK to the right. Kennedy, the Democrat, King, a Republican, and Jesus, the political independent, offered examples and a legacy of servant leadership.

Fences is based on a 1983 play by August that tells the story of a family working hard, but locked into lives of disappointed expectations. The father, Troy, a baseball player who missed his chance to play in the majors, works for the city as a garbage collector. In his world, the driveway of his home is the only place he can exercise dominion. At work, he takes orders. In the home, his wife rules. He serves others.

Why, in today's world, would Mr. Washington and the other producers of Fences, risk $24 million to tell this story?

The answer may lie in our changing times. A culture that in the recent past imagined the world in terms of bland collectives, made up of massed workers and faceless consumers, has once rediscovered the power of community shape the future and give meaning to the present. In film, the superhero of the 20th century has been replaced by flawed characters working together and willing to sacrifice. Stories of attachment and relationship resonate with a public that used to demand stories of super people leading helpless followers. Where a Superman used to clean up the messes made by ordinary men, ensembles of messed up super beings are themselves cleaned up while working together to solve problems.

Servant leadership is the common thread that grants nobility to the characters in Fences and the kitchen images overlooking the action. In Fences, family members complain about their situation, but continue to serve. From a Birmingham, Alabama, jail cell, Reverend King emphasized the "inescapable network of mutuality" that formed the core of his optimism. President Kennedy challenged every American to "ask what you can do for your country." Jesus advised his followers "whoever would be great among you must be your servant." America of the last generation lost track of these messages.

Why is servant leadership resurfacing in the 21st century after generations that valued the needs of the consumer, self-actualization and "greed is good"?

A finer grained understanding of the way communities behave may be driving this rediscovery. Steam engine and dynamo powered cultures of the 19th and 20th centuries, served by legions of technicians and masses of workers, and led by captains of industry, suggested a society divided into helpless groups and masterful leaders. Social mechanics imagined reshaping the world. The result was often social and environmental disaster.

The rise of a more connected digital culture, with its ability to focus on the details of community behavior, has led to practical applications of new insights. In physical world, weather simulations and wellness models in medicine are changing lives. In the military, net-centric warfare and "soft power" methods offer alternatives to the use of tanks and bombs. The gardener, who creates the conditions for growth, is the 21st century image that defines leadership. Our ability, in this digital age, to lift the hood on the workings of economic, political and natural communities drives home the need for servant leaders.

In professional sports, resources management, business, financing and investment, simulation is a useful new tool in getting a feel for how ideas and plans will play out. Fences and the new brand of superhero films featuring motley collections of mutants is the motion picture reflection of a new set of relationships. Our ability to simulate complex outcomes in the real world points to a simple truth: communities shape outcomes. Healthy communities produce healthy people. Damaged natural and human communities produce natural and social disasters. This new understanding calls for a new kind of leadership. Fences reminds us that a life well lived can be measured in service, rather than imagined mastery.

The usefulness of our connection with each other and with our posterity reflected in Fences. The kitchen images may have been overlooked during an age that emphasized power and the self. But, it was here all along. As a way of looking at the world, connection seems to offer a sense of hope and optimism that for a time was in short supply.

The-Peace-of-God Test for Today's Politics

By: Richard Bailey:

Philippians Chapter 4 in the Bible gives us a handy test to determine whether we're on the right political path. Here it is: Check your insides. Do you experience "the peace of God, which passes all understanding"? If not, recalibrate until you do. You know where to look.

Among people who think themselves Conservative -- who value faith, family, schools, unborn life, hard work, lifting their neighbors up, good government and the American Dream -- the peace of God sometimes goes missing. Instead, Conservatives are encouraged by the Left and by Conservative news outlets to internalize fear. Learned helplessness is the result. Those afflicted parrot the latest culture war catch phrases, ignore actual problems and vent. These people are useless to themselves, their families, their communities and their nation.

The paralysis of fear turns bold Americans into members of another easily manipulated victim class. We lose focus. Our out-of-date elite relies on using fear to herd us. Put up a scary-sounding trigger and we are supposed to cower. We should laugh, instead. Taking the bait of fear means losing focus. We should be paying attention to taking down corrupt politicians, lifting people up and supporting the American Dream. Conservatives can play offense, rather than terrified defense. Terror eventually failed even in the old Soviet Union. Why wait? Shed fear now.

Everyone, but American Conservatives, seems to be in on the joke. A paralyzed Conservative opposition is no opposition at all. Elite players throw out serial outrages and watch Conservatives jump. Great fun for them. Not so much for Conservatives living in fear.

This won't last. Abraham Lincoln got it right. Fool everyone forever? Not hardly. Here's where the Philippians 4 test kicks in. It's a way to take our political temperature. We can easily measure the health of Conservative groups and candidates.

It's great to watch Conservatives revive. Listen to the sound of "Enough is enough." See the continuation of 2016 voter revolts in England, America and elsewhere. As the movement gains steam, Conservatives should be swimming in the "peace of God."

A bankrupt elite is on its way out. Attempts to transfix Conservatives with ever-more-extreme examples of elite deviance is increasingly fodder for comedy, not fear. Want to identify a winning side? Check which one has a sense of humor. Now, comedy is coming from Conservatives. When it started to lose, humor left the

The old guard's Narrative collapsed. Covering for their bad acts by accusing the opposition of the very same thing has been standard operating procedure for a generation. For an everyday example, if your politics is based on race and gender discrimination, what better cover than accusing others of your own "racism" and "sexism." This tactic no longer works well for aging oligarchs. Who trusts their words? Maybe only some Conservatives.

Former captive groups are peeling away. A near monopoly of media and academic megaphones can't stop this Conservative uprising. The American Revolution took some hits, but has come out the other side strong. The American Dream is still the world's gold standard.

Governor Newsom and pro-choice legislators are looking to turn California into a "sanctuary state for abortion."

John Gerardi
Executive Director

Right to Life of Central California

In the wake of Justice Alito's leaked majority opinion to overturn Roe v. Wade, Governor Newsom and pro-choice legislators are looking to turn California into a "sanctuary state for abortion." The following radical proposals are currently moving through the State Legislature, or are about to be introduced:

1. State Constitutional Amendment: While the State Supreme Court has already interpreted the California Constitution as protecting abortion, Governor Newsom wants to introduce an amendment to the State Constitution to put an explicit right to abortion in the state Constitution. This would require a 2/3 vote in both houses of the legislature, and then become a ballot initiative for a popular vote in November 2022.

2. Infanticide: AB 2223 will eliminate all criminal and civil liability for any incident of "perinatal death" arising from a "pregnancy issue" due to omission or commission by the mother or anyone working on her behalf. It also allows women to sue a local coroner or public official for investigating a perinatal death or late abortion. This effectively could eliminate all consequences for an act of infanticide, or from an illegal partial-birth abortion.

3. Paying for Out-of-State Abortions: If Roe is overturned, many states will pass laws to ban abortion. AB 1142 and other proposals will provide California taxpayer funding for women in pro-life states to come to California for abortions. It will cover costs for travel, lodging, child care, and lost wages. Medi-Cal coverage will be provided. A recently-passed law in California already bans any out-of-pocket payments for abortion: insurance providers, including Medi-Cal, may not charge any co-pays or deductibles for abortion. Thus, these abortions will be almost 100% furnished at taxpayer expense.

This is the centerpiece of Newsom's vision of California as the nation's "sanctuary" for abortion.

In fact, pro-choice advocates in California are hoping that this suite of proposals will result in hundreds of thousands of women from pro-life states coming to California solely for abortions.

Right to Life of Central California will be fighting this agenda at the California March for Life, June 22nd in Sacramento. If you want to join us and thousands of other pro-lifers in Sacramento, call Right to Life at 559-229-2229, and reserve your seat on our bus!
