THE BATTLE FOR THE CHRISTIAN MIND

Why the Greatest Threat to Believers Has Always Been—and Still Is—the Condition of the Mind

By: Terry Wild

Throughout Christian history, the greatest danger facing believers has never been political empires, cultural collapse, or even

persecution. The most decisive battlefield has always been the same: the human mind. Long before societies drift into darkness or nations abandon biblical foundations, the erosion begins in the inner life of the believer—when the mind ceases to be anchored in the truth of God.

A World Losing Its Grip on Reality

Today, evil is accelerating at a pace that even seasoned observers find shocking. Nations once shaped by Christian conviction—England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Germany, and yes, even America—have embraced moral frameworks that reject biblical truth. Ideas once unthinkable are now celebrated. Standards once grounded in Scripture have been discarded. A false reality has replaced a true one.

In such a time, a pressing question confronts every believer:

Are you sane?

This is not a psychological insult. It is a spiritual inquiry. Biblically speaking, sanity means living in reality—God’s reality. The essence of insanity is not emotional imbalance but separation from what is true and real. And in Scripture, reality is defined by God alone.

The Call to Spiritual Sanity

Scripture warns every Christian to be spiritually minded and not carnally minded. A carnal mind interprets reality without the influence of the Holy Spirit; a spiritual mind sees Continued P7

Bill Gates' Views on Climate Change

RICHARD BAILEY

Bill Gates has been a prominent advocate for addressing climate change for over a decade, emphasizing innovation, global cooperation, and pragmatic investments to achieve net-zero emissions. Through his book How to Avoid a Climate Disaster (2021) and his venture Breakthrough Energy (founded in 2015), he has invested billions in clean technologies like advanced nuclear, carbon capture, and green hydrogen. However, in late October 2025, Gates released a 17-page memo titled "Three Tough Truths About Climate" ahead of the COP30 summit in Brazil, which sparked debate by calling for a "strategic pivot" in global efforts. This shift reflects fiscal constraints, such as U.S. foreign aid cuts under the Trump administration, and prioritizes balancing climate action with immediate human welfare needs like poverty reduction and disease prevention.

Core Beliefs
Gates views climate change as a "serious problem" driven by human activity, particularly greenhouse gas emissions from sectors like electricity, agriculture, manufacturing, transportation, and buildings. He argues that the world must reach zero net emissions by 2050 to limit warming to under 2°C, as outlined in UN reports. Key tenets include:

ÇInnovation Over Doom: Gates is optimistic about technological breakthroughs, rejecting what he calls the "doomsday view" that climate change will "decimate civilization" or cause "humanity's demise." He believes people can "live and thrive in most places on Earth for the foreseeable future" with proper adaptation.time.com

ÇEquity and Adaptation: Climate impacts will disproportionately harm the poor, but for most in developing countries, poverty and disease (e.g., malaria) pose greater immediate threats. He advocates simultaneous action: reducing emissions while funding health and resilience in vulnerable regions.inc.com

ÇEnergy and Growth: More energy access drives prosperity, but current options increase emissions. Gates supports expanding clean energy without hindering development, noting that policies like the U.S. Inflation Reduction Act (2022) exemplify effective steps.inc.com@BillGates

Recent Pivot (2025 Memo)
In his October 2025 memo, Gates urged reallocating resources amid budget cuts (e.g., the elimination of USAID, which provided $8 billion annually for aid). He dismissed rigid emissions targets like the Paris Agreement's 1.5°C goal as "unrealistic" and pushed for:

ÇPrioritizing "tangible improvements in human welfare" over pure environmental metrics.

ÇIncreased focus on adaptation (e.g., resilient infrastructure) and health funding.

ÇContinued but targeted climate tech investments, like those from Breakthrough Energy.

DRAN REESE President Salt & Light Council

Bill Gates has called for a “strategic pivot” in the effort against the climate crisis, writing that the world should shift away from trying to limit rising temperatures to instead focusing on efforts to prevent disease and poverty. Writing on his Gates Notes website, the billionaire Microsoft co-founder criticized what he described as a “doomsday view of climate change.” After decades of dire warnings, even one of the world’s most influential voices on the subject now admits the narrative has gone too far.

Yet, this shift comes after a generation has been raised under a cloud of fear. For years, our children have been told that the planet may not survive long enough for them to grow up. From classrooms to TikTok, young people are bombarded with the message that their future is bleak and that humanity itself is on the verge of extinction. The result is a generation paralyzed by eco-anxiety—a modern form of despair dressed up as science.

A Generation in Panic

In a global survey of 10,000 young people aged 16–25, 59% said they were very or extremely worried about climate change, and 84% were at least moderately worried. More than 45% said these fears negatively affected their daily lives. Another U.S. study found nearly 58% of youth were very or extremely worried. Instead of nurturing hope and stewardship, our institutions have taught despair. Children are told that their homes will flood, their air will turn toxic, and their food will run out—unless they act now.

But this “now” usually means aligning with political movements, not practical solutions. Fear has become a powerful political weapon. When young people are convinced that only government control can save the planet, they become easy supporters of more regulations, restrictions, and taxes that promise salvation but rarely deliver results. The “climate crisis” becomes a convenient tool to expand government reach, redistribute wealth, and restrain innovation.

Stewardship, Not Fear

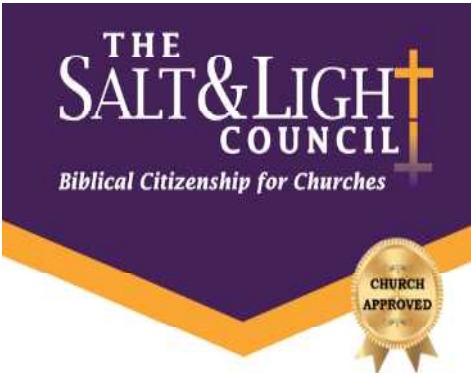

True stewardship is rooted in gratitude, not guilt. It’s about caring for the world God made, keeping our water clean, our air pure, and our communities responsible—not about punishing humanity for existing. Fear-driven policies crush innovation and burden small businesses with costs they cannot bear. Families pay more, jobs are lost, and yet the planet sees little improvement.

Hope for Tomorrow

The earth is still here—beautiful, resilient, and sustained by the same Creator who spoke it into being. Yes, we must care for it, but we must also care for the souls of those who live on it. Our children deserve to know that their lives are not an environmental threat but a divine gift.

Tomorrow will be here. You have nothing to fear. The Lord is in control of our beginnings and our ends. The greatest thing we can do for our children is to help them know and love God, understand their purpose, and live as faithful members of His kingdom on earth.

California's Schools in Crisis: A Call to Parents of Faith

Informed Parents-California

The recently released 2024–2025 performance scores for California's public schools offers a sobering snapshot of academic stagnation and frankly, regression. According to the latest numbers, only 48.82 % of students met grade-level expectations in English/Language Arts. In Math, the figure drops further: just 37.30 % of students achieved grade-level proficiency.

To put that in context: in the 2018–2019 school year before the full disruption of the COVID pandemic California's public school system recorded 51.10 % proficiency in English/Language Arts, and 39.73 % in Math. In other words, despite years of reform efforts, taxpayer investment, and post-pandemic recovery programs, our children are performing worse now than they were five years ago.

These numbers are more than statistical failings—they reflect a crisis of culture and values. While state officials may frame this as a slight "improvement" over last year, the truth is that less than half of our children are reading at grade level, and fewer than four in ten can claim math proficiency. Our Christian communities and especially parents must wake up to what this means for the future of our children, our families, and the very fabric of California society.

In many classrooms today, the greatest emphasis is not on foundational academics (reading, writing, arithmetic, history, science), but on social agendas, identity-based gender studies, and ideological content divorced from a biblical worldview. When the quest for excellence is replaced by relativism and the authority of parents is sidelined, no amount of funding or mandates can make up for it. The academic results mirror the deeper spiritual crisis: without grounding in truth that is anchored in Christ, education becomes hollow.

But there is hope. We believe Christian parents can lead the way in reclaiming their children's education by:

Reasserting their God-given role as the primary educators of their children.

Investigating alternatives such as Christian schools, homeschools, or cooperative learning models rooted in Scripture.

Engaging purposefully with local school boards, demanding accountability, transparency, and values based curricula.

Supporting organizations like Informed Parents-California that are working statewide to restore parental rights, improve academic rigor, and advance education rooted in biblical truth.

At Informed Parents-California, we urge every public school parent to consider the powerful tool offered by OPT OUT California. In cooperation with the National Center for Law &

Policy, OPT OUT California makes it possible for you to submit a legally binding notice to your school, excusing your child from certain programs, curricula, or assessments that conflict with your deeply held religious beliefs.

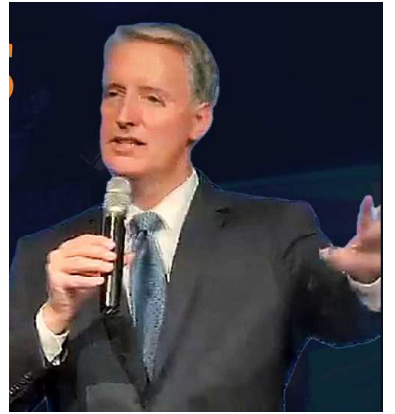

Opting your child out curriculum that conflicts with your faith is one practical way to engage. Visit our website, www.optoutca.org, fill out the OPT OUT Notice (it takes less than two minutes), click submit, and a legally binding OPT OUT Notice is sent by email to your child's school principal and school superintendent. No fuss. No bother.

Your children deserve an education that not only reflects academic excellence, but also the truth and moral strength that comes from Biblical truth. The time is now to stand up, participate, and reclaim your child's future.

PJI-Center for Public Policy Opposes New Jersey Legislation Attacking Homeschooling Families

Trenton, NJ – Pacific Justice Institute – Center for Public Policy (PJI-CPP) announced its strong opposition to New Jersey Assembly Bill 5825 (A5825) as a threat to the constitutional rights of parents to direct their children's upbringing and education. The bill, which imposes excessive state oversight on homeschooling families, mandates annual registration, curriculum submission, and independent third-party evaluations, is the most recent attack on homeschooling families across the country where states are increasingly taking up legislation to curtail options to public schools.

Of the many requirements contained in the bill, A5825 mandates that homeschool curricula must comply with the New Jersey Student Learning Standards for K-12 education set by the New Jersey Department of Education, including subjects such as comprehensive sex education and diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) initiatives, which may conflict with a family's moral, religious, or philosophical beliefs. No other state in the nation requires that homeschool curriculum to align with that of the public schools and A5825's mandate would significantly threaten parental rights and religious freedoms, particularly for families using faith-based curricula.

"This bill is a direct assault on the fundamental rights of parents to educate their children according to their religious beliefs and values," said Brad Dacus, president and founder of Pacific Justice Institute. "Many parents choose homeschooling to incorporate faith-based teachings, avoid secular curricula that conflict with their convictions, or tailor education to their child's unique needs. A5825's requirements would force families to conform to state standards that violate their religious freedoms."

Additionally, A5825 would require families to maintain and submit a portfolio of educational records, including samples of student work and an independent evaluation certifying "appropriate" progress, conducted by a "qualified" third party, which cannot be a parent. This annual portfolio requirement would create unnecessary administrative hurdles, especially for low-income families lacking resources to hire external evaluators—costs that could exceed hundreds or even thousands of dollars per child each year.

"Unfortunately, New Jersey's A5825 follows a disturbing pattern seen in across the country this year where lawmakers have targeted homeschooling families with arbitrary and burdensome regulations that erode family autonomy and personal choice," said Janice Lorrach, attorney and Legislative Counsel for PJI-CPP.

Stand with PJI in defending parental rights make a gift today to help protect homeschooling families and religious freedom in New Jersey.

Season’s Greetings from Mike Morrell and Family

By Mike Morrell

“Give thanks in all circumstances; for this is God’s will for you in Christ Jesus.” —1 Thessalonians 5:18

As the year comes to a close, my family and I wish to extend our heartfelt greetings and prayers to all of you. This is a season to pause, reflect, and celebrate God’s blessings—through Thanksgiving, Christmas, and the hope of a New Year.

A Time to Give Thanks

It is easy to become consumed by the divisions and challenges of daily life. Serving as a California State Senator and witnessing my wife’s work in the Assembly, I have seen communities both united and divided by opinion and circumstance. Yet in this season, we are reminded to step away from debates and conflicts, and simply be grateful to God.

We have experienced countless blessings, both ordinary and extraordinary. From family joys to opportunities to serve, from the provision of daily life to the spiritual guidance of the Lord, we recognize that every good gift comes from Him. Gratitude is more than tradition; it is a posture of the heart.

Celebrating the Hope of Christmas

Christmas is the ultimate expression of God’s love; the birth of Jesus Christ, our Savior, who came to bring hope, reconciliation, and joy to a world often clouded by despair. This season reminds us that God works in both ordinary and extraordinary ways, transforming lives and strengthening families.

Looking Forward with Hope

As a new year approaches, we are reminded that it is not just a change of calendar; it is an invitation to deepen our faith, serve others, and walk confidently in God’s guidance. Even in uncertainty, His faithfulness endures.

Quote:

“In a world that often emphasizes what divides us, let this season remind us of what unites us: the unchanging love of God, the hope we have in Christ, and the joy that comes from living according to His will.”

From our family to yours, may your hearts be filled with gratitude, your homes with joy, and your lives with the peace of Christ.

Merry Christmas, Happy Thanksgiving, and a Blessed New Year!

Stochastic Terrorism

A challenge to the new Christian Revival

R. ELLINGTON SMITH

PERSPECTIVES ON TERRORISM

As if we don’t have enough to be concerned about, an article appeared in Apple News concerning a Silicon Valley billionaire (no name given), with anti-christ views, was taking on the Christian movement after Charlie Kirks death using technology. The technology proposed should have all concerned because it can be classified as

What is stochastic terrorism? It involves a number of techniques used to psychologically program minds and most of all, limits free will. It uses repetition of visual and verbal messaging often hidden in content for subliminal exchange. Using social media, video games, and advertisements combined with artificial intelligence, it becomes especially dangerous to all who encounter it, but the main target is young people. So, how do we break this down?

Artificial intelligence (AI) is used to follow an individuals habits and trends on the Internet and interaction with social media. This data is then matched with wording and verbal messages that were used by the person being followed. Gradually the messaging uses suggestions to draw the suspect into a focus that is backed by imaged content. This content is usually subliminal and/or shown in short segments to force the subject to think according to controlled options. Often times these option selections are made by curser or speech. Once the interaction takes hold, AI is used to further direct the subject or to plant specific suggestions that may take on certain behaviors. The Russians have perfected remote hypnosis using AI that is being adapted into social media this way. China is now adapting it as well.

It is believed that by using stochastic techniques on young people that over time society itself can be changed. Social behavior resulting on the extreme side can be anti-religious, racial chaos, suicide, violence, or groomed assassins. A persons free-will no longer exist.

Very little research on detection of stochastic content has been made and it is very hard to detect in hidden forms on the web. So, the purpose of this article is to inform parents to pay attention to what their kids are doing on the web and watch any changes in behavior. This has been structured to alter the thinking of “faith” and religious belief in young people as an alternative to the revival ignited by Charlie Kirk’s death and Turning Point’s message..

Introduction: Is “Love” Just... Love?” Jesus said to love one another. Love is love. Stop being a hater!” Really? Is that all it takes to shut down biblical morality?

Let’s pause. That phrase “love is love” gets tossed around like gospel.

But what does it mean? Is all love the same? Is love inherently good, no matter the object or context?

You’ve seen those black lawn signs! Here’s the scenario: Christians reject homosexuality, same-sex marriage, adultery, and fornication. The left’s accusation? “You are mean-spirited! They just want to love each other. You’re not loving your neighbor! Jesus said, “Love your neighbor.” Love is love. Be like Christ and don’t judge.”

Ok, let’s dive deeper.

First, where does that command come from?

Yes, it does come from Jesus, but it was first stated by Him in Leviticus 19:18. That’s right. In the Old Testament.

He then reaffirms it in Matthew 22:39 “love your neighbor as yourself.

So let’s put this in perspective, because in these scenarios where we are being accused of being unloving, we aren’t even talking to a Christian – just someone who wants to opportunistically attack us. Here’s one way to respond to them: “So, Ms. Pagan, here’s the kicker: no pagan religion taught this kind of love before the Bible. Not one. Romans? You loved those who could pay you back. Tribes? You loved your own. The golden rule? Only works reciprocally. But Yahweh (Jesus)? He said, love the outsider, the unlovable, the broken, those who can never repay you.

While He was saying that, the ancient ancestors of your belief systems were busy sacrificing innocents on altars. That wasn’t love. That was demon-possessed, selfish, fearful manipulation attempts of false gods.

All this to say, Ms. Pagan, you don’t get to redefine what “Love your neighbor” means. God is the source. He defines it. Not today’s modern culture!”

OK, So What Kind of Love Are We Talking About? Here’s the problem: modern English uses one word “love” for everything. I love pizza. I love my spouse. I love God.

But the Bible? It doesn’t do that. Like the Alaskan Yupik have many different words for snow, the Greeks and the Hebrews had four different words that are translated as love in English.

They have four different words and thus categories of love. Four!

So, when someone says “Love is love,” say this: You keep using that word – I don’t think it means what you think it means. Love is NOT love!”

Then ask, “Which precise type of love are you talking about?”

i. Agape in Greek (ἀγάπη) is the highest form of love, the love of God for man and man for God. It is selfless, unconditional, and enduring. It is the love that God has for the world (John 3:16) and the love that Christians are called to have for one another (1 John 4:7-12).

ii. Phileo in Greek (φιλέω) is the love of friendship, the love between brothers and sisters. It is a warm, affectionate love that is based on mutual respect and shared interests. It is the love that Jesus has for His friends (John 15:12-17) and the love that Christians are called to have for one another (John 13:35).

Oh, and in case you are wondering when they read 1 Cor 13 at every wedding – it’s out of context. Sure, you are supposed to agape your spouse, but you are supposed to love everyone this way, not just the person you are getting married to.

iii. Storge in Greek (στοργή) is the love of family, the love between parents and children. It is a natural, instinctive love that is based on blood relations and shared experiences. It is the love that God has for His children (Romans 8:38-39) and the love that Christians are called to have for one another (1 John 4:19).

iv. Eros in Greek (ἐρως) is the love of desire, the love between men and women. It is a passionate, sensual love that is based on physical attraction and shared desires. It is the love that God has for His church (Ephesians 5:25-32) and the love that Christians are called to have for one another (1 John 4:19).

v. Love in Hebrew (אהבה) is the love of God for man and man for God. It is a selfless, unconditional, and enduring love that is based on God’s covenant with His people. It is the love that God has for Israel (Deuteronomy 10:17-18) and the love that Christians are called to have for one another (1 John 4:7-12).

vi. Love in Hebrew (אהבה) is the love of God for man and man for God. It is a selfless, unconditional, and enduring love that is based on God’s covenant with His people. It is the love that God has for Israel (Deuteronomy 10:17-18) and the love that Christians are called to have for one another (1 John 4:7-12).

Jesus is talking about. This is their reason as to why we should not judge two homosexuals who are in love.

But wait a second – this version of the word for love is never ever used in the New Testament. Jesus didn’t say it in the New Testament. He also didn’t say it in the Old Testament in Leviticus.

Let’s look at the one book that does celebrate erotic love: Song of Solomon. It’s full of sensual poetry. But every line indicates it’s within marriage – and always between a man and a woman. Songs 1:2: “Let him kiss me” – Songs 4 and 7? A poetic feast of desire. The Hebrew word “dod” beloved in a sexual way is used here.

Whenever, and I do mean whenever, “dod” is used outside the context of marriage between a man and a woman, like in Proverbs 7:18 (with an adulteress), it’s condemned. So yes, the Bible affirms eros. But only in the context of marriage. Always. Every other form – outside marriage – is condemned. Polygamy? Condemned. Adultery? Condemned. Fornication? Condemned. Same-sex eroticism? Also condemned.

Hebrews 13:4 makes it clear: “Marriage is honorable... the bed undefiled. But fornicators and adulterers God will judge.”

No ambiguity. No cultural loopholes. (And in case you are wondering, Jesus also made sure we know that marriage is only between a man and a woman. Doubt that? See ahead.) Sex is reserved. Not erased. Not redefined. Reserved.

Paul Blows Up the “Love Is Love” Lie Some say, “But they love each other!” as if affection makes sin holy. But Paul doesn’t play that game.

Romans 1:26-27 God gave them over to “shameful lusts.” Women with women. Men with men.

If you want to understand that better, read that as “God gave them over to their shameful eros for homosexuality.” This wasn’t misunderstood affection. Paul says it’s unnatural desire – not agape, not phileo, not anything holy.

And yes, homosexuals existed back then too – it’s not like Paul had never heard of a homosexual.

1 Corinthians 6:9-10 “Do not be deceived... neither the sexually immoral, nor men who have sex with men... will inherit the kingdom of God.”

It doesn’t say “unless they love each other.” Intent doesn’t sanctify sin. Note also it never says, if you are naturally homosexual then it’s OK, but if you are not naturally homosexual that homosexuality is wrong. Notwithstanding that that delineation makes absolutely no logical sense.

Paul never excuses rebellion because it feels romantic.

Jesus Didn’t Redefine Love or Marriage Some claim Jesus was all about love. True. But what did Jesus say about love and marriage?

Matthew 19:4-6 “From the beginning, God made them male and female... the two shall become one flesh.”

He quotes Genesis. He doubles down on male-female marriage. He doesn’t offer an update. He affirms the original blueprint. So no, Jesus didn’t preach “love is love.” He taught “truth is love.”

So What Does the Bible Really Say? The Bible never says “love is love.” It says God is agape (1 John 4:8). It says agape rejoices in the truth (1 Corinthians 13:6). It indicates clearly that sexual love (eros) outside of marriage between one man and one woman destroys individuals, families, and nations.

Jesus said agape your neighbor – not eros your neighbor. In fact, the 10 Commandments specifically command: don’t covet – i.e., don’t eros after your neighbor’s wife.

So when you say “love is love,” you are trying to claim that agape is eros. It’s not. It never was. Agape is agape. Be precise.

Jesus said, “Have sacrificial, godly love for your neighbor.”

So you have to say: “Sacrificial love is godly love. Anything less is sheer ignorance.”

So next time someone says “love is love,” remind them that Love is not love.

The Bible talks about three kinds of love. Agape, Phileo, Storge? And the one you are trying to claim, i.e. eros isn’t even in the Bible. Agape is not eros. So calling it that? Well, that’s not truth. That’s deception. And that’s not I through the lens of God’s truth. This distinction is not superficialò it is the difference between life and death, clarity and confusion, truth and deception.

THE BATTLE FOR THE CHRISTIAN MIND

Why the Greatest Threat to Believers Has Always Been—and Still Is—the Condition of the Mind.....FROM FRONT PAGE

We are also warned about the influence of the spirit of antichristò not merely the coming Antichrist himself, but the present, corrupting influence shaping culture away from God’s truth. Jesus warned repeatedly, “Do not be deceived.” He gave this warning because deception will be the primary method by which the last days unfold.

Today, we are witnessing the very conditions Scripture describes. The world is rapidly being conditioned for a final, global deception. We are very close to the rise of the actual Antichristò a figure who will take control of humanity through lies, illusions, and the construction of a false reality. The preparation begins in the minds of those who no longer know how to discern truth.

This makes the renewing of the Christian mind not only important—but urgent.

Born Again Into Reality

For the Christian, being óborn from above” is not simply receiving a new doctrine. It is receiving a new capacity for reality. Through the indwelling Holy Spirit, the believer is called and empowered to see the world as God sees it. Yet this transformation does not occur automatically. Salvation is instantaneous; spiritual sanity is a process.

Paul’s command is emphatic: “Be transformed by the renewing of your mind.” (Romans 12:2)

This is not a suggestion. It is a survival mandate for the end-times believer.

A mind left unrenewed will interpret life through old frameworks, cultural lies, emotional distortions, and ungodly assumptions. It will remain vulnerable to deceptionò especially the kind that masquerades as compassion, progress, enlightenment, or tolerance. A Christian can be sincere yet still mentally aligned with the world’s illusions instead of God’s reality.

The New Covenant: Live and Obey

One of the most misunderstood areas of Christian growth is the relationship between obedience and identity. Christians are not required to work to become good people. That was the lesson of the Old Testament: Obey and live. Israel tried and failed, proving humanity’s inability to achieve righteousness through effort.

The New Covenant reverses the order. It is no longer obey and live—it is:

Live... and then obey.

Because of Christ’s finished work, believers begin their Christian life from a place of righteousness, not toward it. We who trust in Christ are made new by His death and resurrection. We are declared righteous by faithò not by performance, emotional consistency, or flawless behavior.

We remain righteous until we sin; and when we do, we do not fall out of our identityò we are invited back into restoration. We are permitted to repent, renounce the sin, and return to the righteousness of Christò completely free from sin’s bondage.

We do not carry óthe dead corpse” of our past strapped to our back. We reckon the old man dead and walk in the newness of life in Christ. This is not denialò it is faith. And biblical faith is more than beliefò it is:

- Understanding the truth
- Conviction in the heart
- Commitment of the will

This is the foundation for renewing the mind. Without knowing who we are in Christ, transformation becomes impossible. With it, transformation becomes inevitable.

Where Right and Wrong Truly Reside

Scripture teaches that the essence of right and wrong is located in the human spirit, expressed through the conscience. But the conscience can weaken or distort if the mind is shaped more by culture’s narratives than God’s truth.

This is why the renewal of the mind is not merely academicò it is spiritual, emotional, moral, and practical. It reorders our thinking, purifies our perceptions, restores our identity, and aligns us with God’s reality.

Without this renewal, believers risk living in a fractured stateò saved in spirit but mentally bound to old patterns. This is a dangerous form of instability, making Christians vulnerable to the deception saturating the last days.

The Human Will Must Rise

God provides the Spirit, the Scriptures, and the grace. But the believer must provide the will.

The mind will not renew itself.

Lies will not uproot themselves.

Truth will not apply itself.

To remain spiritually saneò especially as the spirit of antichrist intensifiesò the believer must choose renewal daily.

Standing Sane in an Insane World

As nations descend into confusion and moral chaos, the believer’s responsibility is to remain anchored in the unchanging reality of God’s truth. The world is being prepared for the ultimate deception, but the renewed mind stands firm, unmoved, and spiritually clear.

The call is simple, urgent, and profoundly relevant for this hour:

Be transformed.

Be renewed.

Live in Christ.

Walk in truth.

Be spiritually minded.

Be sane.

In an age dominated by false realities, renewing the mind is not merely helpfulò it is the primary safeguard God has given His people as the last days approach.

“A Christ-centered caregiver, wife, mother, and inspiring writer”

For decades, well-meaning California officials have only exacerbated the homeless crisis. Now, with pressure from the Trump administration and the upcoming 2028 Olympics in L.A., politicians with the power to reform failed policies may finally be ready to listen and act.

The team at California Policy Center looks beyond noble platitudes of good intentions and analyzes real data. “Housing First” initiatives have proved costly and ineffective. A state audit released in April 2024 “estimated expenses to help the homeless over just a five-year period from 2019 through 2023 at $24 billion.” Despite this jaw-dropping figure, tangible improvement is scarce. Multiple studies, including one from UCSF in June 2023, conclude approximately 80% of the homeless are in this dire situation for two reasons: mental illness and/or substance abuse. Housing First offers housing without preconditions, and people can choose whether to get treatment. Free housing does not magically heal a tormented mind or eliminate an addict’s desire for drugs. Individuals may or may not elect to undergo treatment.

Mr. Christensen encourages people of faith in California who are tired of seeing the homeless trapped in endless suffering to advocate for the “Treatment First” approach. With Treatment First, individuals must participate in mental health and/or addiction treatment before or as a condition to receive housing.

“Actual change begins at the local level,” noted Lance in a recent Zoom call with community leaders. Here is a suggested plan of action to inspire lawmakers to consider the benefits of Treatment First:

1. Schedule an appointment with your local legislator at their district office.
2. Bring with you a family affected by homelessness, a member of the clergy who ministers to the unsheltered, and an expert, such as a psychiatrist or neurologist.
3. Present one or two policy changes that support Treatment First. See <https://californiapolicycenter.org/reports/ending-homelessness/> for a comprehensive list of recommendations. Examples include expanding conservatorship laws, restoring funding for residential programs, and allocating money for crisis units and services at the county level.

Besides the public push at this critical time, intercession is equally vital. Pray for lawmakers to be receptive to Treatment First legislation and honest about the failures of Housing First. Uplift the leaders of organizations such as the ACLU and Disability Rights CA, who have previously blocked Treatment First measures in the name of civil liberties. Ask the Lord for unity so sensible bills will pass that truly help the homeless.

“Our Lord, I know that you defend the homeless and see that the poor are given justice.” (Psalm 140:12, CEV) There has never been a better time to advocate for those suffering in the streets. Contact Dawn Collier at (916) 718-8572 or dawn@calpolicycenter.org with further questions on what you can do to end pervasive homelessness in California.

California’s Homeless Crisis: Real Solutions for an Opportune Time

Lance Christensen, VP of Government Affairs & Education Policy at California Policy Center, has spent years researching legal reforms to identify solutions offering the Golden State a way out of its rampant homelessness quagmire. Mr. Christensen urges the time is now to take action.

“Fields to Fortune” about the importance of “betting on yourself” which in turn will push yourself to recognize and seize opportunities that are in front of you. Moses’ story of doing exactly that, despite certain challenges in his own life, shows the reader the importance of taking action and staying resilient even through the tough times.

Working in the fields with his hands to making deals in the world of sales, Moses Heredia is an example that anything is possible to those who are willing to put in the work and have faith in the Lord.

“Fields to Fortune,” is a book dedicated to Elestina Heredia, Moses’ mother who taught him the importance of discipline. Moses shares his experiences of being raised to work hard even at times without pay or reward. His mother taught him to value hard work and stay rigorously consistent through that work, even when the going gets rough. Moses is a testimony that should motivate you to stay strong through seasons that are harsh and even seasons that are not so harsh, because in the end, the strength you carry through those seasons will shape you to become a more resilient a blessed person. Hebrews 12:11 tells us, “No discipline seems pleasant at the time, but painful.

Later on, however, it produces a harvest of righteousness and peace for those who have been trained by it.” This axiom of discipline is shared by Moses to be a core value of his, and is something that he encourages the world to employ into their lives.

I appreciate how Moses shares about the rewarding mindset of staying disciplined, for it truly is the disciplined course of action that is the true expression of love. The bible exhorts us to live actionably like in scriptures such as 1 Peter 3:18, which says: “Let us not love with words or speech, but with actions and in truth.”

I suppose too many times we as humans can wander off into overthinking - which can paralyze us into a state of non-action. If you are someone who often thinks deeply, it may be a sign that you care a lot, yet struggle to find ways to solve the problems which you face. There are also times when a person is influenced and pulled figuratively into a direction that leads to lawlessness (sin), which leads inevitably into pain and suffering. Recognizing the signs of danger beforehand and making the quick avoidance of such a path can save you from suffering the consequences of sin.

We must choose the suffering of living disciplined, which leads to life, instead of living wickedly and experiencing a conclusive pain due to that wickedness. In short, obeying the way of righteousness (obeying The Lord) will in turn bless you. With that being said, I feel it important to look around at the blessings which surround us, because doing so is obviously more beneficial as opposed to worrying uncontrollably. While being self-aware in this gratitude, we can be looking to invest our time into worthwhile endeavours while being watchful of temptation and of forces which are intended to stifle your journey to success and true happiness.

I encourage you to read Moses Heredia’s “Fields to Fortune” which can help encourage you to keep on seeking a beautiful, meaningful and rewarding life. As the words of Yeshua go, “seek and you will find.”

Matthew Jones
Moses Heredia, CEO Global Processing Systems & author of “Fields to Fortune” is a man who is known to carry Strength, Focus and Heart which has propelled him from humble upbringings in Hobbs, New Mexico to becoming a successful entrepreneur.

Moses’ story of resilience in hard work, being decisive and goal oriented exemplifies the capabilities we have, as people called by the Lord, to achieve exemplary milestones and bless those around us with that success. Moses tells the reader in

On April 19,1775, the American Revolution began with the Battles of Lexington and Concord. Fighting the British would be no easy task. The colonists obviously would need an army.

Given the maritime prowess of the enemy, we also would need a navy. On October 13, 1775, the Continental Congress authorized the purchase of two vessels to be armed for action against British merchantmen. This resolution created the Continental Navy and is considered to be the origin of the U.S. Navy. However, since the sixteenth century, the British understood the need to have detachments of sea soldiers or naval infantry to sail with its armada. These marines performed various critical functions.

During battles at sea, these expert marksmen would engage exposed sailors on enemy ships. They would repel boarding parties dispatched to seize their own vessels, and would constitute the boarding parties dispatched to seize enemy ships. They provided assistance for manning the guns if necessary. Their skill with small arms made them an essential component of any landing force for combat ashore. Additionally, they provided the captain and other officers with a reliable security force to ensure orders were carried out and that any attempt at mutiny was thwarted.

Yet even before the formal establishment of the Continental Navy, colonial ships and their attached naval infantry had entered the fight for independence. On May 9, less than a month after Lexington/Concord, soldiers from Brigadier General Benedict Arnold’s Massachusetts militia captured a British sloop on Lake Champlain and renamed it Liberty. It was manned by colonial sailors and marines. Nine days later, on May 18, the Liberty and her crew captured a British sloop and renamed her Enterprise. The new crew for Enterprise included 18 marines.

These informal “marines” continued to support the revolutionary cause in a variety of ways fighting the British, capturing their ships, and even protecting payroll. It soon became obvious to the Continental Congress that it was time to turn these marines into Marines. On November 10, 1775, Congress passed a resolution that two battalions of Marines be raised and the United States Marine Corps was born.

Although not widely known, these Marines would not limit themselves to naval operations, but would be included in extended land campaigns as an adjunct of the Army. For example, Marines fought with General Washington at the critical battles of Trenton and Princeton. It has long been the practice of agencies of the United States government to adopt a motto expressed in Latin. The motto of the United States Marine Corps is Semper Fidelis Always Faithful. In part, it referred to their commitment to remain loyal to the captain in the event of mutiny. Beyond this, however, it referred to their undying commitment to their fellow Marines, their country, and their mission.

Semper Fidelis would also be a fitting motto for us Christians, for Without faith, it is impossible to please God. [Hebrews 11:6] May we always be ready to be the first to fight for right and freedom, and to keep our honor clean.

Creating and Maintaining a Healthy Lifestyle for a Long and Productive Life!

By Samuel Hernandez

How many people do you know who have fallen and broken bones?

Over the past few years, I have known people and read of celebrities who have suffered major injuries from a fall. My brother in-law fell down a flight of stairs. My sister tripped while shopping. And a well-known celebrity fell exiting a shower and is now paralyzed.

Falls can be a very serious event. An uncle of mine fell from a ladder while he was painting his home eaves. He was in his mid-sixties, a vibrant and energetic man. Yet, one misstep and he fell to the ground and hit his head. He was rushed to the emergency room by paramedics. Within a week he passed away.

Have I got your attention?

This is the first article in a series. In this series, I address your diet, developing your core, strengthening your upper and lower muscle groups in the next few articles.

Falls can be fatal. Mostly they’ll disrupt your life. However, the older you are, the poorer the prognosis can be. Healthcare reports tell us that the risk of death among people over 60, is greatest within the first year.

This past summer I attended a Dodger game in LA. We had seats in the top section, and the steps were quite steep leading down to our seats. I took a step and my shoe slipped on the smooth surface of the first step at the top. My feet gave out from below me and gravity did the rest. I slid down about 12 to 15 steps, after falling on my bum. My right forearm caught the bulk of my weight while my body continued to ride the steps until I came to a stop.

I’m well over 60. I didn’t break any bones, or sustain any serious cuts, bruises or other injuries. I simply got up and returned to my seat. I did get an abrasion on my arm. However, I healed quickly, with no ongoing issues.

I thank God for his protection. And I’m grateful for my lifestyle of eating well, exercising, and running.

What does your health score look like?

Ask yourself, “What can I do now to keep you from falling?”

If I do fall ñ what can I do now to help in my recovery?”

Prevention

The healthier you are, the more likely you will maintain an optimistic outlook and you’ll have energy in your step. As a result, you’ll be more aware of your surroundings, while walking in crowded malls, museums, or the grocery store.

Maintaining a healthy body is key to your balance, energy and mental outlook. Your mental alertness will help keep you from injuring yourself from needless falls. One way to ensure a healthy body is with a healthy diet. Eating whole foods is extremely important. I like what one dietician recently said on how to go about eating whole foods, “eat whole foods,” he said. That is, avoid eating processed foods.

Processed foods are not whole foods, he emphasized. And neither is fruit laden yogurt, or fruit juices laden with high concentration of sugars. So, eat whole foods that are not processed or that contain significant levels of sugar.

Be sure to include fresh, organic vegetables and fruit. Eliminate white bread, pasta, muffins, or sweet breakfast rolls. Be sure to stop eating candy and chocolates. Yes, say good-bye to your favorite Snicker bars and Hershey chocolate bars.

Are you a soda-pop drinker? Be sure to rid yourself of these very high sugar content drinks. Substitute your cravings for soda pops with lemon water, tea, and coffee. It’ll take a few weeks to detox from the sugars, but it’s well worth the effort.

Essential Vitamins

While you will get nutritional value from your organic fruits and vegetables, you may not get enough, or you may miss some nutrients and vitamins from your diet. To make sure you get the right vitamins to support brain and bone health, be sure to include the three vitamins B, C, D, and Calcium.

Vitamin B is great for your mental health and acuity, and to help you with your energy. It supports brain and nerve health. Vitamin B supports the formation and maintenance of healthy nerve cells and brain function.

Vitamin B is essential for blood cell production. You can increase your energy with vitamin B supplements. It’s essential for the production of red blood cells, which carry oxygen throughout the body, and it prevents anemia. Vitamin B aids in the production of energy. It plays a role in converting food into energy, reducing fatigue and weakness.

You most likely know that vitamin C is great for preventing or reducing the effects of colds and flus. However, the benefits go well beyond these basic benefits. Vitamin C may also help reduce your risk of chronic disease, manage high blood pressure, lower your risk of heart disease, reduce blood uric acid levels and help prevent gout attacks, and may help prevent iron deficiency.

The Mayo clinic tells us that the benefits of vitamin D will help your bone health—vital for preventing broken bones when you fall. The body needs vitamin D, along with calcium, to build bones and keep them healthy.

The body can absorb calcium, but only if it has enough vitamin D. And Calcium is a major part of bone health. Vitamin D also has many other uses in the body. It supports immune health and helps keep muscles and brain cells working.

With your new attention to your diet and a few modifications to your diet and increased consumption of vitamins, watch your foggy brain begin to clear, and your level of energy start to rise. You will no longer have sugar highs and lows. Instead, you will begin to see a new level of energy in your step—all critical in preventing falls and helping you to recover when you do fall.

California's public schools are falling short, jeopardizing both our students' potential and the state's future. Standardized tests reveal alarming statistics: 44% of 11th graders cannot read proficiently, and 72% lack basic math skills. For many of these students, the result is a minimum-wage job with little opportunity for growth. How can we turn this around?

The Children’s Educational Opportunity Act (CEO Act), a 2026 initiative, empowers parents to take charge of their child’s education by choosing the school that best fits their needs, rather than leaving the decision to government bureaucrats or politicians.

Leading this effort is Kevin McNamee, former Mayor of Thousand Oaks. As a professor, a 35-year business professional, and a doctor of chiropractic and acupuncture, McNamee brings extensive experience in networking and coalition-building to drive meaningful change for California’s students.

Christian’s First Amendment Rights Violated at Mayday USA Event by City of Los Angeles - Lawsuit?

On May 31, during the Mayday USA event in Hollywood, the City of Los Angeles allegedly violated the First Amendment rights of a Christian group seeking to assemble and protest.

Mayday USA had applied for a permit to gather on Hollywood Boulevard to support parents and children and to celebrate their Christian faith through prayer, song, and baptisms. However, the City denied the permit, classifying the event not as a protest or assembly protected under the First Amendment, but instead as a concert or performance. Officials instructed the group to apply for a different permit through the Bureau of Street Services (BOSS), which handles permits for concerts and entertainment events.

The BOSS office subsequently denied the request, stating that they do not approve permits for protests or free speech activities—effectively leaving the group without a path forward. Organizers claim this is a tactic the City uses to discourage groups from exercising their constitutional rights.

Notably, the same type of permit requested by Mayday USA was approved for the LA Pride event the following week—at the same location and time—which also included community celebration and advocacy.

Attorneys representing Mayday USA argue that the City’s actions amount to a clear violation of their First Amendment rights. The City later suggested the group apply for a last-minute permit, which severely restricted their activities: baptisms were prohibited, and organizers were told that extended singing or speaking would not be considered protected speech under the First Amendment.

Mayday USA is currently exploring legal action against the City of Los Angeles in response to what they view as unconstitutional restrictions and discriminatory treatment.

CONVERSATION WITH A MOM

This afternoon, I received a call from a mother inquiring about how the CEO Act works and when it will take effect.

After giving her a brief overview, we discussed her family’s situation. She and her husband have chosen to send their children to a faith-based school, which costs between $1,200 and $1,500 per month. Due to rising costs and inflation, they have had to cut back on their own food expenses to afford tuition. They also forgo vacations to prioritize their children’s education.

I told her that she and her husband are remarkable parents for making such a sacrifice. Every month, they pay $5,500 in tuition to keep their children in the school of their choice. Since this is after-tax income, they actually need to earn $11,000 to cover these costs.

With the CEO Act providing $17,000 per child annually for education, their family would free up $5,500 per month—allowing them to save for retirement, take vacations, and ease their financial burden.

These are the families we are saving with the CEO Act.

Unearthing the Lost Treasure: Wisdom Paperback – October 23, 2024

by Dr. Sheila Schuller Coleman (Author)

“The wisdom of my mother was a saving grace to my brother and me. Unfortunately, wisdom has become buried under conflicting voices. As a result, our society is left to flounder when it comes to being able to tell lies from truth. This book is a valiant effort to unearth this treasure before it is lost another day.” Dr. Ben Carson “Unearthing the Lost Treasure: Wisdom” unearths the treasure of wisdom, provides the map to where it can be found, and how to embrace it for the treasure it is.

The author takes readers of any age on a journey through engaging, humorous, and heartfelt stories, that capture the hearts of those who are longing for more in life. The stories are woven throughout the book as “pearls of wisdom”. These pearls of truth are strung together in strands, themes that can lead to the best life possible.

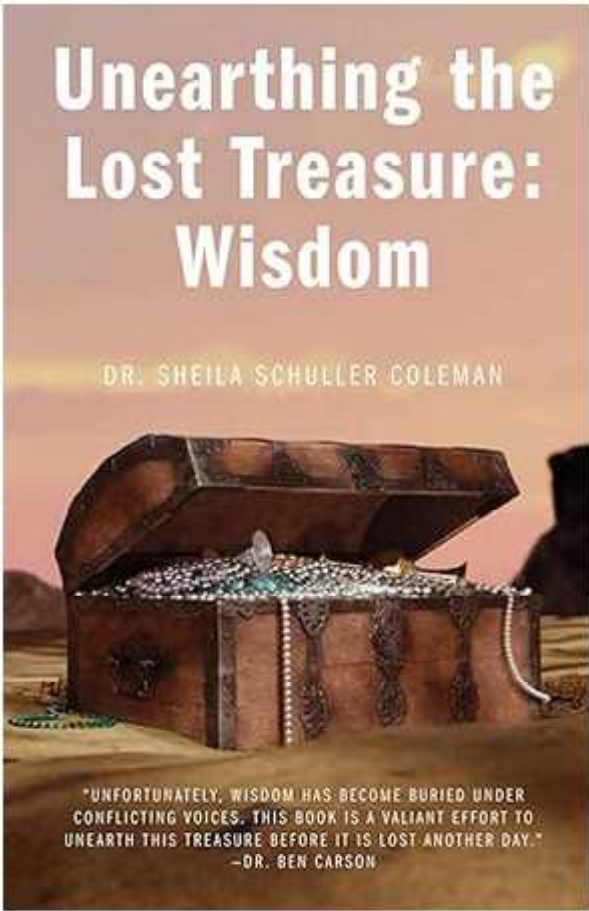

“This book is my gift to the younger generations. I am in the later part of my life, and I can tell you it has been the best life possible. I wanted to share the valuable lessons I learned (some the hard way), in a way that will capture your heart. Most of all, I pray this book will awaken life and love and truth in your heart. So you, too, can live the best life possible.” – Dr. Sheila Schuller Coleman Wisdom is learning how to tell truth from lies.

It is a treasure that has been buried. But that’s actually good news!

Like any buried treasure, it still exists. It just needs to be unearthed.

The treasure is there. It’s time to unearth it and restore it!

New book set to be released late May 2025.
