THE NAZI HUNT FOR HOLY TREASURE FROM THOR'S HAMMER TO THE HOLY GRAIL

Today, the castle is a looming reminder of how so many members of the Third Reich were beguiled by ancient myths, old orders of chivalry, and the occult. We all know the pantomime villain Nazis of the Indiana Jones films, desperate to dig up the Ark of the Covenant and the Holy Grail. But the fact is, many real-life Nazis were just as obsessed as their cackling silver screen counterparts. (paragraph ✨)

Despite his aversion to conventional Christianity, Himmler was fascinated by the legend of the Grail, perhaps seeing it as a source of immense power. After all, he believed that another fabled artefact – Thor's hammer – could be requisitioned as a weapon by the Third Reich. In an outlandish letter to the Ahnenerbe, a think tank set up to give academic backing to Nazi racial ideology, Himmler stated his belief that Thor's hammer was 'an early, highly developed war weapon of our forefathers'. For this reason, Himmler demanded that Ahnenerbe's team should 'find all places in the northern Germanic Aryan cultural world where an understanding of the lightning bolt, the thunderbolt, Thor's hammer, or the flying or thrown hammer exists'. Gilgamesh Tomb Believed Found

Archaeologists in Iraq believe they may have found the lost tomb of King Gilgamesh – the subject of the oldest "book" in history.

The Epic Of Gilgamesh - written by a Middle Eastern scholar 2,500 years before the birth of Christ - commemorated the life of the ruler of the city of Uruk, from which Iraq gets its name.

Now, a German-led expedition has discovered what is thought to be the entire city of Uruk - including, where the Euphrates once flowed, the last resting place of its famous King.

"I don't want to say definitely it was the grave of King Gilgamesh, but it looks very similar to that described in the epic," Jorg Fassbinder, of the Bavarian department of Historical Monuments in Munich, told the BBC World Service's Science in Action programme.

"The most surprising thing was that we found structures already described by Gilgamesh," Mr Fassbinder stated.

"We covered more than 100 hectares. We have found garden structures and field structures as described in the epic, and we found Babylonian houses."

But he said the most astonishing find was an incredibly sophisticated system of canals.

"Very clearly, we can see in the canals some structures showing that flooding destroyed some houses, which means it was a highly developed system.

"[It was] like Venice in the desert."

Nimrod: found?

Has the original despot been discovered?

By Christopher Eames • September 14, 2018

Nimrod was clearly a powerful ruler, establishing many of the initial post-Flood cities. The name “mighty one” connotes “tyrant.” He was renowned as a hunter and protector, and the phrase “mighty hunter before the Lord” would better read “mighty hunter against and in place of the Lord.” This man, as we will see further down, set himself up as a god over his people, and he worked directly to counter the will of God.

The Sumerian King List is an ancient listing of the earliest rulers of Sumer and surrounding regions. It starts out by describing a list of rulers of vast ages, followed by a cataclysmic flood. For a full explanation of this king list and how it parallels the biblical account of extremely long antediluvian ages, see our article “Biblical Longevity of the First Humans.” Just after the “900-year-old” rulers, after lifespans began to rapidly decline, a certain Sumerian ruler emerges by the name of Enmerkar. (“Sumer” is believed to be an Akkadian form of Shinar. Shinar is the name of the great southern Mesopotamian plain where post-Flood mankind descended to and where Nimrod began his rule—Genesis 10:10.)

Most of the rulers on either side of Enmerkar’s reign are known only from brief token references. We know a whole lot more, though, about Enmerkar based on additional texts and references. This king bears a lot of resemblance to the biblical Nimrod.

The biblical Nimrod came on the scene just three generations after the extremely long-living antediluvian patriarchs (many of which lived to 900 years). Similarly, Enmerkar ruled three generations after the King List’s 900-year rulers.

It has been put forward that the “kar” in the name Enmerkar could mean “hunter.” If this is the case, then we would have the name Enmer the Hunter—as paralleling “Nimrod, the Mighty Hunter.” Perhaps the consonants in Enmer, NMR, are a connection to the name Nimrod, and the original Hebrew spelling NMRD.

Ge 11:5 And Jehovah came down to see the city and the tower which the sons of Adam had built.

6 And Jehovah said, Behold! The people is one and they all have one language. And this they begin to do. And now nothing which they have imagined to do will be restrained from them.

7 Come, let Us go down and there confuse their language, so that they cannot understand one another's speech.

8 So Jehovah scattered them abroad from that place upon the face of all the earth. And they quit building the city.

9 Therefore the name of it is called Babel; because Jehovah confused the language of all the earth there. And from there Jehovah scattered them abroad on the face of all the earth.
