The origin of fine art printing and NFTs meet the age of the future. The German startup Soulmade Origins and Belgian Turboslow NFT Agency collaborates for Ozkan Durakoglu's awarded photo manipulation art piece 'The Fairy Tales for the Little Ones' as a unique collector's item and physical print in NFTs at SheNFT Netherlands, first in Europe, part of Dutch Blockchain Week.

Soulmade Origins and Turboslow NFT Agency's collaboration gives creators new monetization opportunities and full control over high-quality art prints of their digital work and NFTs exhibiting in art galleries and exclusive events.

Soulmade Origins is bridging the gap between digital NFTs and physical ownership and it gives NFT collectors the sensation of physical ownership through interactive NFT cards with embedded printed electronics. Turboslow NFT Agency is a creative platform for digital/crypto artists, NFT collectors, art galleries, metaverse and brands with diverse perspectives in new media industry.

Anil Altas Brug, Co-founder of Turboslow NFT Agency and Dr. Ing. Karin Weigelt, Co-founder of Soulmade Origins, both female web3 entrepreneurs met through DLT Talent mentoring program from Frankfurt Blockchain School, said 'We are very excited to have this collaboration in Dutch Blockchain Week at SheNFT Netherlands Exhibition. The visitors will have a chance to connect the next generation of the Phygital NFTs, powered by blockchain and fine-art print. The extraordinary high-quality art print of Ozkan Durakoglu comes with an embedded printed technology, that binds digital and physical art together. Creating an interactive experience where the NFT value evolves jointly with a physical artwork in your home or gallery. By this, NFT artists, collectors and art galleries will have authorized and copy protected physical ownership through the electronic NFT cards. This solves the pain points in the blockchain ecosystem by fraud security, royalties and giving access to new audiences. Additionally, the novel technology does not require batteries, conventional electronics or plastics, we are using a 100% green technology.'
