Day Three Action Workbook

From Demand to Direction

This workbook turns Day Three into action. It is designed to help you identify real demand, translate it into usable ideas, and decide what to build next based on where you are right now.

Part 1: Capture Real Demand

Your goal is not to invent problems. Your goal is to recognize patterns that already exist. Use exact language from comments, messages, or posts when possible.

Where did you observe this conversation?
Exact words or phrases people are using:
What do they seem frustrated or confused about?

Part 2: Group the Patterns

Most problems repeat. Your job is to group similar complaints into themes that point toward opportunity.

Part 3: Test Before You Build

You do not need a full product yet. Choose the smallest possible response that lets you test interest.

One small AI-assisted solution I could test:
What result would this help create?
How could I test this without building a full offer?

If You Are Past Beginner

If you already have experience, your next step is refinement. Use AI to analyze responses, track engagement, and identify which problem themes generate the strongest reaction. Double down on clarity, not volume.

Advanced builders win by responding faster and more precisely, not by doing more.

This workbook is meant to be used repeatedly. Demand changes, but patterns always leave clues.
