

My wife Kris and I were going through some old pictures last week. There is one that stood out. It was a picture of a skinny kid next to a jet ski! Well it was Zachary at Lake McConaughy during one of our family get togethers. You never had to ask who wanted a ride on a jet ski. Zachary was glued to the jet ski landing area. He was built for speed! Little did we know we were fostering Zach's true passion for speed that he would later experience at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. The memory brought a great big grin to both of us. Now we know what we were witnessing (from a 10-year-old).

"Follow your passion." Zachary knew it!

As Gerard Manley Hopkins said, "What I do is me: for that I Came."
