Page 2 quote from Akil and Bee shows a certificate in a frame in a frame in the hero's home office with words incorrectly assigned to Nelson Mandel as part of the speech of South Africa President in 1994 in the film Akil reads aloud a full quote and an indication of the authorship. This is a sharp moment in the film, which probably reflects the main "message" of the film. Unfortunately, Nelson Mandela did not take into account such speech in his inaugural speech and almost certainly never mentioned and almost certainly he did not write these words. In fact, this "quote" is downloadedB'Te Jale: If you spell it right, you'll be our 10th and final finalist. Judges: "Carmagnol". Franter: Can I have the definition, please? Women Judges: Live Song and Street Dance. Cheating, boy: hm ... c ... and ... r ... m ... and ... o-l-e, karmagnol. Legal Man: That's right, which means we're the tenth and final bee finalist in the region. [Manifest stormy applications, especially from the boy's mom. Extended Akila] Kiana: [Pumps the door] cheated !!! Cheated !! I have seen it! That boy's mother helped him! Judge Man: What ...? Excuse me ... who are you? Kiana: I am a nurse akly. I stood here and saw the boy's mother hand him the letter "G". She said, "Geeeeee." The boy's mother was deceiving: he knew the name. I mean, we looked at it. He knew it. [The boy's mother shook her head] That's a serious question. [Silence. Eventually, the boy's mother gets angry from her chair] and cheats on the boy's mother: Oh, you're right, it's serious! You know you give these kids ulcers! You know how long he studied?! He knew that name! Short boy: [shame] No. I didn't do that. Judges: Sorry, number 62, you are disqualified from the competition. p. 2 Akilah and the Bee is a quote on a framed certificate in the protagonist's home office, and the words are misattributed to Nelson Mandela as his 1994, South African language portion of the presidential inauguration. In the movie \xe2 \x80 \x9cakaekelah \xe2 \x80 \x9d reads the entire quote and task aloud. This is an exciting moment in the film and definitely sums up the essence of the film \xe2 \x80 \x9d. Unfortunately, Nelson Mandela did not include such language in his inauguration speech and almost never spoke or wrote it.They were born to show the glory of God in us. And when we allow our light to shine, we unconsciously allow others to do so. ; Our deepest fear is that we are immeasurably powerful. We are most frightened by the light, not the darkness. We ask ourselves: Who am I to be great, great, talented, fabulous? Really, who are you not to be? You are God's child, your humble attitude does not serve the world. Nothing is illuminated if you belittle yourself so that those around you do not feel insecure. We are all created to shine as children do. We were born to show God's glory that is in us. It is not only suitable for some of us; It is in each of us. And when we allow our light to shine, we unconsciously allow others to do so. When we release fear, our presence automatically liberates others.

>Marianne Williamson from the movie" Returning to Love: Reflections on Miracle's Course "(Harper Collins, 1992; Section 7 out of Chapter 7) corrected a" shortened "quotation (used in the film), which included" Elipsis "indicating where it was skipped Words: "Our biggest fear is not that we are inadequate." Our deepest fear is that we are immeasurably powerful. We are most frightened by the light, not the darkness. We ask ourselves: Who am I to be great, great, talented, fabulous? Really, who are you not to be? ; ; ; Game for little does not help the world. ; ; ; We were born to show God's glory that is in us.

; ; ; And when we allow our light to shine, we unconsciously allow others to do so. >Marianne Williamson here is a whole quote with a" edited "language marked" The line is deleted "to emphasize the change from the original." Our deepest fear is nothing but ourselves.We; That's all. And while we allow the light to shine, we unconsciously give permission for the same. Although we are freed from our own fear, our presence automatically creates others.
