Some states authorize criminal penalties, charged as felonies, while others restrict public camping, require local enforcement, or establish procedures for warnings, shelter placement, diversion, or removal from public property.

The Coalition recognizes public safety concerns, but removing people without housing pathways does not resolve homelessness.

State laws and enforcement approaches differ.

IGI KBGI HOUSING COALITION MISSION

Comprehensive alternatives to homelessness

The Coalition will prioritize families with children, homeless and displaced children, elderly persons, military veterans, persons with disabilities, chronically homeless individuals, survivors of domestic violence, medically vulnerable individuals, and people transitioning from shelters, hospitals, correctional facilities, and other institutional settings.

Our objective is to create comprehensive alternatives that integrate housing, healthcare, food security, employment, education, transportation, social assistance, and economic opportunity.

Collaboration business owners, developers, financial institutions, healthcare organizations, veterans' organizations, nonprofit organizations, faith-based organizations, humanitarian partners, and private-sector participants determined not to leave anyone behind.

OUR 2026 COMMITMENT

From crisis to sustainable independence

The IGI Kingdom Building Global Initiatives U.S. 2026 Agenda is committed to moving beyond the temporary management of homelessness toward comprehensive solutions designed to prevent, reduce, and ultimately eradicate homelessness.

Our objective is not simply to move homelessness from one location to another. Our objective is to move people from homelessness to housing, from instability to opportunity, and from crisis to sustainable independence. KBGI is privately funded, and our mission is to preserve families while restoring dignity and stability.

IGI KBGI HOUSING COALITION

The IGI KBGI Housing Coalition recognizes homelessness in the United States as a housing, humanitarian, public-health, family, disability, veteran, and senior-care crisis requiring immediate coordinated action.

In 2026, U.S. homelessness was reported at roughly 653,000–746,000 people based on 2025 point-in-time counts, with about 40% living unsheltered and homelessness rising about 12% year-over-year.

Causes and Contributing Factors

Housing affordability: Rising rent and mortgage costs are a major driver of homelessness worldmetrics.org+1.

Economic instability: Job loss, low wages, and unemployment contribute significantly worldmetrics.org.

Health and safety crises: Physical and mental health issues, domestic violence, and discrimination increase vulnerability

Climate displacement: Natural disasters and climate change are increasingly forcing people from their homes worldmetrics.org.

Forced evictions: Around 15 million people are forcibly evicted annually, often resulting in homelessness and extreme poverty TRVST.

Trends and Projections

If current trends continue, the global homeless population could reach 200 million by 2030 worldmetrics.org.

Homelessness is rising in most countries, with only a few exceptions showing stable or declining numbers.

Data collection is limited: only 78 of 195 countries provide official statistics, and since 2018, only 57 nations have released updated government data on homelessness.

Social and Health Impacts

Homelessness is linked to poorer physical and mental health, shorter lifespans, and post-traumatic stress disorder Our World in Data+1.

It also limits educational and economic opportunities, perpetuating cycles of poverty and social exclusion TRVST.

These statistics highlight that homelessness is a global crisis, driven by structural inequalities, economic pressures, and environmental factors, affecting hundreds of millions of people worldwide.
