FUN WITH SONG LYRICS

David Bowie – Ziggy Stardust (1972)

We just passed the 45th anniversary of Bowie’s final public performance as his most famous character, Ziggy Stardust. The event happened at London’s Hammersmith Odeon on July 3, 1973. David had grown tired playing the role, and decided that he would retire the alter ego, and reinvent himself the following year. The only thing is he failed to tell his eight-man band before making the announcement on stage. Not surprisingly, his fans weren’t the only ones in shock. As for the mondegreen in question? This song contains the phrase, “Making love with his ego”, which can easily be mistaken for “Making love with a seagull”.

George Michael – Father Figure (1988)

Born, Georgios Kyriacos Panayiotou - The chorus should be a no-brainer. “I will be your father figure, put your tiny hand in mine”. Instead some people have made the mistake, “I will be your Butterfinger, put your tiny hands in mine”.

Prince & The Revolution – Raspberry Beret (1985)

Born Prince Rogers Nelson - A woman named Lisa Cox confesses she works in a noisy kitchen and the radio reception is lousy. These are the words I sing because I don’t care too much for Prince, and couldn’t be bothered to find out the real ones until now. Instead of the song’s title, Lisa sang, “She wore a red furry toupee”. Where have I seen one of those lately again?

Grab Some Nuts Day

Date When Celebrated: August 3

Grab Some Nuts Day is today. One could call this a truly nutty day for several reasons.

First, let's explore just what does "nuts" mean? Are we talking about nuts that you eat!?! Most likely so. But, we also could be talking about the nuts that go with bolts. Or, perhaps this day is about some of our nutty friends. We've all got a few of those. Unfortunately, the creator of this special day is unknown, and he or she has not offered documentation on this special day.

As far as we have discovered, information is very sketchy and only resident on the internet. Internet websites have unanimously assumed that this special day is about nuts that we eat. So, let's follow that theme and go grab a handful or two of nuts to eat and enjoy. This leaves us with yet another dilemma about today.

Grabbing a bunch of edible nuts poses yet another uncertainty. The problem here, is the definition of what is an edible nut. Most of us have heard over and over again, that peanuts are not nuts, they are legumes. But, almost all of us will be amazed to know that technically walnuts, cashews, pistachios and almonds are not nuts either. Yet, all of us and the food industry refers them to as nuts. So, the whole concept of this special day is more than a little nutty when you stop and think about it.

Well, that is about it in the nutshell. Before you become a complete nut case, we suggest you don't give it another thought. Rather, go out and have a great Grab Some Nuts Day.

Vampire Bats	Bigfoot	Monster	Ghost	Captain Hook

Friends Phoebe and Zoe (both girls) are going on a camping trip with their guy friends Collin, Calvin, and Markus. Each person brought his or her own sleeping bag from home, each a different color (blue, red, orange, green, and yellow). When they arrive at their camping site they decide who is going to do what chore: one person is needed to start the fire; two people are needed to pitch the tents; and two people are needed to prepare the meal. After it gets dark the five friends try to out scare each other with frighteningly scary ghost stories. Each person told one story about either a vampire bat, Bigfoot, a monster, a ghost, or Captain Hook.

Your job as an observer to their camping trip is to figure out which person brought which sleeping bag, did what chore, and told which story. Good luck and bring your own toilet paper!

The girls rode in their own car while the boys drove the truck with all the camping supplies in the back. The boys drove a lot faster than the girls and by the time the girls got to the campsite the tents were already up. Collin was frantically searching for the matches to light the fire but couldn't find any. "Leave it to the boys to forget the matches," Phoebe whispered to Zoe, as Phoebe grabbed the lighter out of her pocket and quickly got it started.

Markus told the girls that he had put their red and yellow sleeping bags into their tent. Collin's stomach started growling and so he yelled out "What are we going to eat?? I'm starving!" Calvin replied, "I've got it all under control. We're having burgers that are already on the grill." After dinner the five sat around the campfire and listened to each other tell stories. Phoebe got so scared at Markus' Captain Hook story that she hid her head under Collin's blue sleeping bag. Phoebe didn't believe her story to be just a legend she truly believed in Bigfoot and told her story with great pride. One of the guys with the orange sleeping bag loved scaring everyone with his tale of a monster that roamed the woods and preyed on unsuspecting campers. One of the meal makers told her horrible story of vampire bats while the fire starter fell asleep in their yellow sleeping bag. The owner of the green bag was so tired after having worked so hard at putting up the tents that he fell asleep as well, right in the middle of Collin's ghost story. Despite all the scary stories the five campers all fell soundly asleep from all their hard work and fun of the day.
