PATRICK KINUTHIA

Born on October 11, 1967, Patrick Peter Kinuthia began his illustrious journey as a poster artist for Citizens Cinema Cooperation, where he crafted evocative scenery and portraits under the guidance of the esteemed Pakistani artist Mohammed Rafiq. Drawing inspiration from the likes of Norman Rockwell, Paul Rahily, and David Shepherd, Patrick's work is a harmonious blend of tradition and innovation.

Though proficient with oils, he confesses a special affinity for watercolors, which grant him the freedom to effortlessly weave water and pigment into light-hearted, vibrant compositions. He has embraced a distinctive style that accentuates the subject against a subtle background—a technique particularly evident in his wildlife paintings, where this contrast serves to clarify and elevate the focal element.

Patrick's canvases are a testament to his dual nature: a free-spirited artist and a meticulous observer of the human and animal form. His bold strokes illuminate the centerpiece of each work, while the understated backgrounds invite the viewer to immerse themselves in the essence of the moment.

I recently had the pleasure of meeting Patrick in Nairobi, and I was deeply moved by his unwavering passion for his craft. He was equally delighted to have his art featured on my website, leading us to form a creative partnership. I am excited to share some of the captivating paintings I acquired during our meeting.

Additionally, Patrick welcomes commissions for custom pieces—offering you the opportunity to choose the dimensions, medium, and subject matter to create a painting uniquely tailored to your vision.
