

Meet Murray Dines, Founder of Go Bird Go™

Founder Bio

Murray Dines was born and raised in Kansas, where his lifelong passion for animals began early. As a child, he was surrounded by nature and wildlife — keeping dozens of turtles, several birds, and a few dogs, while spending countless hours watching the thriving bird population in his own backyard. His parents built stone birdbaths and kept feeders filled with seed, creating what Murray fondly remembers as a true “bird paradise.” Towering oak and elm trees shaded the yard, while bats and countless bird species filled the skies. It was in this setting that his love for animals and birds flourished.

On June 11, 1982, Murray was featured in the Topeka Capital-Journal for rescuing and caring for injured birds — an early recognition that would foreshadow the vision he carries forward today. Over the following years, he and his family went on to rescue more than 25 additional birds, nursing them back to health and setting them free. Much of that success came thanks to his mother, who was “100% inspirational” in the process. It was her idea to roll bits of hamburger into worm shapes to feed the birds — a method that worked and saved lives. “None of this would be possible today if it were not for my mother,” Murray says. “She’s now in her eighties and still doing well.”

That passion never faded. As an adult, he owned parrots and finches, and cared for what he laughingly calls “a boat load of birds — well, isn’t that what Noah would say?” He also developed a deep love for dogs, especially Rottweilers, having owned 12 of them throughout his life. In the past few years, hummingbirds have become a major focus point for him as he has helped a good friend and neighbor feed and care for a large group of hummingbirds that return to their home annually. With that experience — and others — he has fallen deeply in love with the bird species. Murray has now turned his entrepreneurial skills toward bringing a groundbreaking new product to market: one that pairs new technology with superior craftsmanship, combining hardware, software, and services never before seen in a bird feeder. “Consider me the Sharper Image of bird technology,” he says.

Today, Murray is the founder of Go Bird Go™, a Kansas-based company pioneering the world’s first branded, bundled, all-inclusive 4G LTE Smart Bird Feeder. Until now, Wi-Fi has been the only mainstream option on the market for smart feeders — limiting range, reliability, and true outdoor freedom. Go Bird Go™ changes that. This breakthrough product combines 4G LTE cellular connectivity, AI-powered bird recognition, built-in micro SD storage, IoT SIM card integration, and a 4000mAh solar-assisted battery. It’s also fully 5G-ready and packed with additional features that Murray and his development team engineered to make this the first-ever complete smart feeder solution. With LTE coverage available 24 hours a day, bird lovers can finally enjoy a ready-to-use feeder that works anywhere, anytime — no home internet required.

Building on that success, Murray has also introduced a 4G LTE Cellular Hummingbird Feeder, designed to rival any Wi-Fi-enabled bird or hummingbird feeder on the market. This innovation is set to elevate the hummingbird community to a whole new level — delivering stunning images, data, and experiences like never before.

As a single father of four and a second-year college student maintaining a 3.8 GPA, Murray has built Go Bird Go™ from the ground up with determination, creativity, and Kansas grit. His work is driven by both innovation and purpose: every product is assembled and tested in Kansas, supporting local communities while serving a global audience of bird enthusiasts.
