

After setting the final module in place, Liscott used the bucket of an excavator to attempt to push the top module so that it was even with the walls on the bottom module. These modules weigh in excess of 40,000lbs. All Liscott's efforts did was damage the top modules. To this day, the top module hangs over the bottom modules by 2"

