SPOTLIGHT: SHOCKS AND STRUTS

Many vehicle owners don't realize it when the shocks or struts on their vehicle are worn out, because as they age, their condition degrades slowly, and they don't detect the gradual change in performance that occurs. This makes shocks and struts one of the more elusive components to reveal their wear, and one of the most critical to inspect and replace. The reason? Safety.

When shocks and struts wear, there's more than ride quality that is affected. Understanding their link to safety begins, literally, where the rubber meets the road. The contact patch of a tire is the ultimate factor that affects and allows the proper handling and braking of any vehicle. Simply put, traction is everything. By dampening the movement of the suspension, the shocks and struts keep a vehicle's tires firmly in contact with the road to maintain this contact patch.

When a suspension spring rebounds after hitting a bump, if the motion is not dampened, the upward force of the vehicle body causes enough lift to reduce the tire contact patch. This is how traction is lost, affecting handling and braking, but it will also cause uneven and accelerated wear on the tires.

Inside a shock absorber or strut, a piston is connected to the piston rod, which is the visible polished rod that moves in and out of the shock. Oil dampens the motion of the rod as it is forced through small orifices in the piston. When this happens, the oil heats up. Scientifically, shock absorbers convert kinetic energy (the movement of the suspension) into thermal energy (the heat built in the oil which is dissipated through the shock or strut body into the atmosphere).

Over time, these continuous heat cycles take their toll on the oil, causing it to break down, lose its viscosity and lose its ability to lubricate the internal components of the shock or strut. It eventually gets dirty and corrosive, leading to accelerated wear and damage to the shock rod seals, resulting in leaks, a low oil level, and shocks that no longer dampen the movement of the suspension.

Even if a shock or strut isn't leaking, the oil and components inside can be worn out, and additional components that wear over time are the shock or strut mounts, strut bearings and coils springs. These often exhibit symptoms such as noise when turning or going over bumps.

A routine inspection of shock and strut condition should be performed with every vehicle service, however since shocks and struts may begin to show signs of wear as early as 50,000 miles, a more in-depth inspection should be performed on vehicles above this mileage including a "bounce" test, ride height measurement, leak check, dust boot and bump stop inspection, coil spring inspection, and strut bearing and mount inspection. High quality replacement shocks, such as the NAPA Proformer line, feature high carbon, hardened, fully chromed piston rods, premium all-weather oil, high-grade installation hardware and vehicle specific valving, to maintain a safe and reliable ride control system and restore OE handling and comfort.

When replacing struts, it's best to replace the entire assembly so no worn components are overlooked. NAPA Quick Struts are a complete, pre-assembled, ready to install replacement strut assembly, designed to meet or exceed OE performance, including high-grade bearing plates, upper spring seats, coil springs, boot kits and spring isolators.

Helping your customers understand the effects of worn shocks is important for the safety of everyone on the road, and replacement NAPA shocks and struts restore performance, safety and comfort, and provide the peace of mind only high-quality components can offer.

*DON'T WAIT FOR WINTER, PREPARE FOR IT.

Without lighting that can lead the way through blistering snowstorms and foggy conditions, you might as well even leave your fleet's base. More excessive winter conditions could mean little visibility for your driver and other drivers on the road.

We applied our self-regulating heating technology through lighting applications across the entire vehicle, preventing ice and snow build up so commercial vehicles can see and be seen from all angles during the entire season.
