Recently discovered documents from the Hildebrand family collection reveal new information about three different Virginia Mennonite Conference events in the late 19th century.

Carol Moser reported in a 2013 lecture at Hildebrand Mennonite Church that the Curator of the Washington County Mennonite Historical Library, Hagerstown, Maryland, found new information about Conferences from 1873, 1879, and 1886. These documents were discovered in a wooden box that was nearly thrown out in the mid-1990s. Carol and others have been reading the materials collected from four generations of Hildebrands, including many records from Virginia Mennonite Conference Bishop Jacob Hildebrand (1816-1899).

Highlights from the Conference records in this box include information from the Conference that met at Hildebrand Church in April, 1873. The published minutes of the Virginia Mennonite Conference indicate that no records have been found for the 1873 meeting, though now, with these recently discovered primary sources, we have details about that Conference that met in the first Hildebrand building in Augusta County, Virginia. Another record from the 1879 Virginia Mennonite Conference gives great detail about that Conference, none of which has been heretofore known. Though Bishop Hildebrand’s handwritten notes don’t say, presumably the Conference was held in the Hildebrand Church, the second frame meetinghouse, built in 1877. We publish both sets of “minutes” from these two conferences in this issue of Historian.

Finally, a ten page essay written by Bishop Jacob Hildebrand reveals new information about the intensity of debate over the mustache that took place in the 1886 Virginia Conference meeting.

We print these new sets of “minutes” so that future chroniclers of Virginia Mennonite Conference records will have information for such needed updates.

In 1873 President Ulysses S. Grant began his second term in office, Reconstruction was still in effect, an economic depression struck the U.S. economy, and Levi Strauss received a patent to make copper rivets for denim pants that he was producing.

On the next page we feature the 1879 minutes of Virginia Mennonite Conference, from Bishop Jacob Hildebrand’s collection. The official Virginia Conference records indicate that “no records” are available for 1879. These notes from Bishop Hildebrand’s collection provide new detail and information. These are not official minutes, rather they are personal notes, hence the poor English and lack of attention to standard writing conventions. The spelling, punctuation, and sentence line below is seen here as it appears in the original documents.

Carol Moser lectured on these materials April 14, 2013, a CrossRoads Heritage Center event, at the Hildebrand Mennonite Church, Augusta County, Virginia.

HILDEBRAND MENNONITE CHURCH

Located along Hildebrand Church Rd., Augusta County, Virginia, the Hildebrand Church traces its origins to 1826. In 1877 members at Hildebrand Mennonite Church began using a new building, located across the road from the cemetery. The church left the Virginia Conference in 2001. In 2014 the meetinghouse is under the management and ownership of the CrossRoads Heritage Center, Harrisonburg, Virginia.

There are five feature articles in the Shenandoah Mennonite Historian about Bishop Jacob Hildebrand in 19th century Augusta County, Virginia. Former Editor James O. Lehman wrote these past articles in 2011, 2009, 1996, and 1995. The articles can be accessed online at http://mennonitearchivesofvirginia.net/Shenandoah_Historian.html.
Daniel E. Burkholder, from Dayton, Virginia, showed the Editor a copy of Mennonite Bishop Lewis Shank’s 1837 Confession of Faith recently during a visit to Burkholder’s Buggy Shop.

Daniel E. Burkholder bought the small 1837 Mennonite Confession of Faith at auction. Inside the Confession he found Bishop Lewis Shank’s signature.

Confession of Faith in Thirty-Three Articles, 1837, is a seminal book in the early history of Virginia Mennonites. Written by Bishop Peter Burkholder, Jr, an ancestor of Daniel E. Burkholder, the Confession is out of print today. Pictured behind the Confession on Burkholder’s Buggy Shop counter is a facsimile of the book, a scanned copy produced and sold on the internet for 21st century consumers.
Occasionally while digging in archives, the researcher is surprised and pleased with a newly discovered document or photograph. Having written extensively about Virginia Mennonite Bishop Lewis Shank in the Zion Mennonite Church congregational history book, 2010, and while conducting research for the forthcoming Weavers history book, the Editor found this wonderful photo of Bishop Lewis Shank.

The only known photo of Bishop Shank had been a grainy copy of a picture that portrayed him in less than complimentary terms. This photo of Bishop Shank (1855-1942), in his prime, while serving the congregations of the Northern District and preaching in many other churches, reveals the human side of the generous, moderate, and considerate Bishop. Lewis Shank and his wife Mattie Shank (1856-1934) served widely in mountain churches and Valley home base congregations. Shank served Virginia Mennonite Conference as minister for 59 years, with 41 years of those years as Bishop.

Lewis Shank was the fourth in a line of five Shank family Mennonite Bishops in the 19th and 20th centuries: Bishops Henry Shank, Michael Shank, Abraham Shank, Lewis Shank, and J. Ward Shank.

On one of many preaching circuits to the north and east of their home in Broadway, Virginia, a mountain family served Mattie and Lewis some food that Mattie was suspicious of and thought that Lewis should not eat. She kicked him under the table, only to discover that she had kicked the wrong man!

EMALA Meeting

On March 8, 2014, a crisp Saturday morning in Lancaster, Pa., twenty-three historians, archivists, and representatives from a variety of historical associations gathered at the Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society for a meeting of the EMALA.

The Eastern Mennonite Associated Libraries and Archives is an association of libraries, archives, and historical societies in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia. EMALA meets three times a year and each group is asked to pay an annual fee. Virginia Mennonite Conference paid $50 to EMALA in 2013. Edsel Burdge, Jr, serves as chair and Benjamin K. Beiler is Treasurer.

The group gathered to conduct business but also to learn about DACS, a set of standards for describing personal papers, archives, and manuscript collections. DACS, or Describing Archives, a Content Standard, was developed by the Society of American Archivists.

Colleen McFarland, Archivist for Mennonite Church USA, led the group in exercises aimed at teaching participants the rudiments of archival description. McFarland spoke about how archives are arranged, how hierarchies within groupings of items are established, and the need to be consistent with descriptive principles within an archive.

Participants to the one day workshop came with their own copies of Describing Archives, a Content Standard, from the Society of American Archivists. McFarland used the book to lead participants through the process of arranging materials in an archive. Participants were then put together with a partner and McFarland gave each pair a set of materials to process, including devising titles, formulating dates and extents, evaluating a Finding Aid for DACS compliance, and describing collections. McFarland reviewed Library of Congress standards and highlighted Authority names as established by the LOC.

During a report over the lunch hour, McFarland reported on a digitizing project being conducted by the Anabaptist Mennonite Digital Collaborative. The Mennonite Library and Archives at Bethel College, Kans., the Menno Simons Historical Library, Va., and the Hesston College Library, Kans., along with Mennonite Church USA Archives, Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Ind., and the Mennonite Historical Library, Goshen, Ind., are sponsoring the project. Initial goals are to digitize the Gospel Herald (1908-1998) and The Mennonite (1885-1998) for free worldwide access on the internet. The digitizing will be done in 2014-2016.

The next meeting of EMALA will take place on July 26, 2014, at the Mennonite Historical Association of the Cumberland Valley, Chambersburg, Pa.
