

They told other animals that lived there about what they saw at their old home and how pollution could harm them. They made sure to explain that harmful fluids make their shells break down, and the trash is very dangerous. These things can hurt us and where we live, they said.

