

Can the relations between Russia and the US improve?

President Trump should meet with President Putin, as has every president since FDR met with the leader of Russia or the Soviet Union. Our two countries control 90% of the nuclear weapons on earth and we should have a respectful relationship. Russia, under their current leadership, is not going to be our friend, but they can be an ally, especially against terrorism. I think Russia would like a piece of the international trade that goes to China and may be willing to bargain for some of those dollars. Russia has already garnered financial support from Germany with the gas pipeline so there may be mutual opportunities to improve relations.

The uproar over President Trump attending this summit is purely nonsense. President Trump has met with China's President Xi who poses a bigger threat to our country's way of life than Russia. President Obama met with the communist thug Castro to try and build a better relationship with Cuba. Trump has met with North Korea's Kim Jong Un in hopes of making headway to stabilize the world in terms of peace.

I do not think this summit will have any effect on election meddling as Russia has been doing it for decades. This time Russia succeeded as they have split our country into an internal civil war. Let us not forget the US meddled in the Ukrainian elections, as well as elections in South America. To the US we think we are on the right side of the issue, but other countries have a different opinion.

Mexico interferes in our election process more than any other country, yet we call them a friendly ally. Mexico is largely responsible for denigrating US society by failing to control their northern border.

MC_071718