

Reality to the Baby Boomers

Yesterday my spy-vs-spy conservative friend attended a graduation in New Jersey. An event in liberal country with various age groups. What an informative opportunity for someone more than a relative. Discussions abound. Economy prevailed but runner up topics are telling.

Two key topics were Project 2025 being touted as a MAGA platform and of course abortion. First, the only similarity between MAGA and P2025 is several ideas that align, but differ in the achievement means. A point of contemporaneous American diversion, explained well in a simple story.

A group of people in Seattle want to do a vacation in Los Angeles. Part of the group preferred a direct drive down Interstate 5. The others, wanting to enjoy the ride and view, preferred a route along the Pacific Coast Highway. Nevertheless, the means was justifying the end which meant compromise was possible of the things between.

Now some of those people have changed their minds. Some still want to go to Los Angeles but others now want to go to Chicago. Problem. The end was no longer part of the means. Going through Oklahoma City was not a compromise to anyone. Thus, when the means and the end are offensive to any resolve, you must think out of the box. Visiting Los Angeles, via Chicago, by driving through Oklahoma City, could be meaningful. The moral here is the big picture. It's the vacation, not the city and not the route.

So, in the real world what the hell has changed in the direction of our country? Politicians are not putting America first. This is the division afflicting America. Citizens not putting the Constitution first is an equal division afflicting America. The similarity between Project 2025 ideas and Trump's vision is that pieces of the Project 2025 are fundamentally workable, but other ideas is like going through Oklahoma City to get to Los Angeles. The Constitution has to prevail. If the Constitution has not granted the federal government the authority then the decision is upon the states.

The cornerstone of our Nation was based on the Citizens agreeing to be democratically governed, through a republic, as memorialized in the Constitution. Back in the day this understanding was unwavering. We were steadfast. A perfect example was the coined phrase; "I may not agree with what you say, but I will defend your right to say it". A phrase that caused a bewildered frown by those young-uns at the graduation who failed to grasp the concept.

This brings us to the perception of the legality of abortion as perceived by those the young-uns (under the age of 60). They want a federal law to override states that ban abortion. They don't care about state rights.. This is a monumental indictment of our failed education system. First, "they" are ignorant of the Constitution edict; "if a right is not articulated to the Federal government, it is reserved to the State (people)".

Second is equal protection. Imagine where the people of one State want to enforce their will onto a different State. (Think California versus South Dakota.) The key cornerstone of our country, the Constitution, is no longer a prerequisite of our young-uns thought process. The basis for our country's very success is lost. Our education system has failed us.

The Generations X, Y, Z (and some Boomers) are ignorant of the Marxist agenda in the USA. They do not see the control of the news media by the government, the unrestrained use of government agencies to intimidate and incarcerate people, or the active policies to circumvent our Constitution as a threat to their freedom. Why? Our education system has brainwashed our students to thinking our country is bad. But, illegal aliens see the USA as a beacon for freedom.

The economic mess that the Biden Administration has wrought on this country may be a blessing in disguise. Lack of freedom due to no money is resonating that the country is in the wrong direction.

In November 2024 the country has a chance to get back to where we were once free to buy a hamburger and walk the streets without fear.

Don't be stupid and vote for stupid. Trump for president.
