

Our Constitution Need Help

Our Constitution grants a singular privilege. The right to be part of this great country and the environment it shepherds. Unlike most privileges, this one justifies itself by a covenant. An agreement where the privileged agrees to be governed by the constitution along with elected representatives, and the constitution in turn guarantees to protect our inalienable rights including protection, pursuit of happiness and liberty.

Now the constitution breathes like no other such document. It defines a structure that all privileged agree to follow. It defines the structure of government with checks and balances. It awards few rights to the government by reserving all others to the privileged. Then it affords specific protection of the privileged. A set of ten rules called the Bill of Rights.

Together, with its covenants, the Constitution birthed the greatest country in the history of the world. The consent to its supreme laws provides its longevity. Simplicity assured the guaranteed pursuits of the privileged. The republic representation leaves control in the hands of the privileged, forever.

The beautiful construct of our Constitution is being threatened. Soberly realizing our country is in trouble because our Constitution is not being honored. The only protection our constitution has is the covenant of "consent to be governed" by its Supreme Law. There is the rub. Many legal immigrants are not assimilating or accepting the laws and societal norms of the United States while many citizens look the other way. Oddly, elected officials and naturalized immigrants undertake an oath of allegiance to protect the Constitution, natural born citizens do not. But then they inherited the civil discourse and moral code provided by our Constitution covenant. Those claiming another culture or set of laws do not acquire the privilege of citizenship, or its protection. Nor should they. Instead, they advocate a perverted belief in an inferior heritage to destroy the United States of America.

The Constitution needs help and protection by us privileged citizens. Get your gun Annie.

TwoSmartFarts.com- Aug2026