PRESS RELEASE

25 January, 2021 18:00 ET

LEEDS PRESS CORP ... is actively seeking 'minority authors'. According to the Publisher, we can support 'Black Authors' ... by buying books that celebrate black culture and brings awareness to African-American lived experiences. Readers can purchase and promote black authors' books on their Social Media platforms, as well as, on websites like GoodReads, nominating black authors for Literary Awards, joining local book-clubs and discuss their favorite books on blog sites. Readers can also write and leave book reviews on online bookstores like Amazon, Barnes and Noble, Public Libraries, and many other retailers ... which goes a long way in promoting the book of a "Black Published Author"...

LEEDS PRESS + MINORITY AUTHORS

diversity in the
marketplace..."*

... Leeds Press plans to celebrate Black Authors, on a rolling basis by publishing their stories. "They need to know that we care," said, Reuben Wanjala, Managing Director of Leeds Press Corp. Mr. Wanjala went on to say, "To truly experience the culture, supporting black authors' books provides a great platform where ideas that generate empathy and connectedness can naturally occur." To increase diversity in the publishing marketplace, the company is actively seeking minority authors wishing to publish their books, wishing to tell their stories .. wishing to inspire the world and leave their mark. "We Too ...Were Here!"

LEEDS PRESS CORP ANNOUNCES, Celebrated Playwright Dr. Mildred Summerville, Creator of the Play "Spare the Rod, Spoil the Child," Unveils Her Autobiography...

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, October 23, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ — Wilson, North Carolina — Dr. Mildred Summerville, a dynamic force of creativity and education, takes readers on an extraordinary journey through her life in her latest book, "Woman with A Vision." Available now and touching hearts everywhere books are sold, this memoir encapsulates a life of determination, achievement, and unwavering dedication to community empowerment.

A proud graduate of Fayetteville State University with a Bachelor of Science degree, Dr. Summerville continued her academic pursuits, achieving a Master of Education degree from Bowling Green State University and a Principal's Certificate in Educational Administration from East Carolina University. Her commitment to education and leadership shines through her roles as a coach, athletic director, lead teacher, curriculum specialist, and accreditation visiting committee member. Her impact extended to serving as both an assistant principal and principal.

However, Dr. Summerville's influence extends beyond her professional achievements. She established the James and Leanter Summerville Academy in memory of her parents. This community-based alternative school allows suspended students to continue their education. Her dedication earned her recognition from President Barack Obama and President Joe Biden's administrations through two Lifetime Achievement Awards. Furthermore, her tireless efforts led to numerous accolades, including the Resa Mitchell Award, The Talent Show of the Year Award, The Playwright & Gospel Stage Play of The Year Award, and the Gospel Playwright of the Year Award. Dr. Summerville's passion for the arts found its manifestation in the acclaimed stage play "Spare the Rod, Spoil the Child," which garnered praise from audiences and featured renowned gospel artists such as Pastor Shirley Caesar, Dorinda Clark-Cole, Melvin Williams, Evelyn Turrentine-Agree, and Le'Andria Johnson. The play's success led to performances in Georgia and Washington, D.C., captivating audiences with its powerful message.

In addition to her literary achievements, Dr. Summerville's role as a community leader is exemplified by her creation of the Tall One Outreach Ministries, a nonprofit organization dedicated to making a positive impact on the lives of others. She also remains integral to the Mt. Calvary Word of Faith Church, serving as an Armor Bearer for Pastor Shirley Caesar. As an honored member of the National Directory of Who's Who in Executives and Professionals and The Heritage Registry of Who's Who, Dr. Summerville's influence spans far and wide. Her exceptional leadership and commitment have earned her recognition from organizations such as the National Association of Professional Women and W.I.D.U. Radio & TCP Magazine.

"Woman with A Vision" is more than a memoir; it's a testament to the power of determination, resilience, and the pursuit of dreams. Join Dr. Mildred Summerville as she shares her remarkable journey of triumph over adversity, community upliftment, and artistic expression. Available at all major book retailers, "Woman with A Vision" is an inspiring must-read that will leave an indelible mark on readers' hearts and minds.

2023 | UBORA COFFEE

The Quest for ... the best Coffee!

U bora was born out of a common passion for coffee and the vision to ...

...impact society positively. Ubora's objective is to change the landscape of the typical coffee company by cultivating a return to tradition, community, collaboration, responsibility, and excellence to provide the ultimate espresso bar experience in an environment that generates conversations and ideas.

Ubora means excellence in Swahili, a tribute to Africa ... where coffee was discovered. Ubora strives for excellence in every cup, a commitment to deliver the coffee bean at its peak of roasted perfection for the fullest enjoyment. Ubora offers a wide array of specialty coffees, all roasted in-house, responsibly sourced, and through fair trade from coffee farmers and producers worldwide.

Every one of Ubora coffees has a story, like Ubora's Peru Cajamarca from the Aprocassi cooperative that develops social and environmental projects to contribute to the improvement of the living conditions of the farmers/producers and maintaining environmental sustainability.

Whether you love a frothy, sweet work of art or an aromatic, calculated pour-over, Ubora Coffee has the perfect cup to curb your craving.

These two Italian drinks use a mix of espresso, steamed milk, and foam, but their two distinct compositions define them. Historically, the cappuccino essentially shared the same caffeinated Italian birthing suite as the espresso, reaching maturity during World War I and II.

Ideally, a 6-ounce drink split evenly into thirds (1/3 espresso, 1/3 steamed milk, and 1/3 wet foamed milk), the cappuccino offers a rich, airy taste with relatively low acidity - essentially a strong coffee with a festive bit of foam on top.

In contrast, lattes characteristically contain very large amounts of milk, with the name itself originating from the Italian phrase for "milk coffee." A breakfast standard for hundreds of years, it ultimately did not establish permanent residency in international cafés until the 20th century, when its creamy, velvet-like texture and enticing foam art began to take the world by storm. Composed of 1-2 shots of espresso with 5-6 ounces of steamed milk, the standard 8-ounce latte of old takes up roughly 5/6 of the cup, with the remaining real estate occupied by a thin layer of foam. Skilled baristas pour this final layer of foam into creative, intricate designs known as "latte art."

Ubora deviates from the original, opting to serve its lattes in 12 and 16-ounce, with 2-3 espresso shots, to create a significant distinction in flavor and texture between them.

Despite their relatively distinct differences, misconceptions still abound between the two. Due to the need for foam that looks and feels almost like a light meringue, you cannot make latte art on a cappuccino. You just purchased a short latte if you get a cappuccino with latte art. As a milk-forward country, when it comes to our coffee traditions, most people have no idea that the magic of the cappuccino lies in the milk foam - the best part of milk products in coffee. That foam carries all the sugar and acid reduction needed to support an espresso's integrity without dilution fully.
