As we celebrate Black History Month, we honor the legacy of resilience, innovation, and leadership that continues to shape our communities. At Waterbury OIC, this legacy lives on through our commitment to empowering individuals with the skills, training, and opportunities needed to build brighter futures. By investing in workforce development, education, and economic mobility, we are not only honoring the past—we are actively creating pathways for the next generation to thrive.

HONORING A LEGACY OF LEADERSHIP AND JUSTICE

This month, we honor Reverend Jesse Jackson, a tireless champion for civil rights, economic empowerment, and social justice. His lifelong commitment to expanding opportunity and uplifting underserved communities continues to inspire the work we do every day. At Waterbury OIC, we carry forward that legacy by creating pathways to education, employment, and self-determination—ensuring that the fight for equity is not only remembered, but advanced.
