

It's Not Your Fault; It Is the Fault of All.

It's not your fault that we exist the way we do; It is everyone's fault.

It's not the fault of the elite minority ruling over with capitalist interests; it is the fault of everyone blindly following them.

It's not the fault of the father for raising us the way he did (or didn't); it is all our faults for giving his toxic traits a place to flourish and not holding him more accountable.

It's not the person's fault they are begging on the corner; it is all our faults for not providing a better society for all people, including the ones who may not behave we all do.

It's not the thief's fault that they break into homes and steal; it is the fault of every parent for not stepping up and helping another parent in need of raising their child.

It's not the teenagers fault she can't afford to feed her child; it is the fault of society for forcing her into this role of motherhood, or convincing her this was the morally correct decision, ignoring her needs.

It's not the person who litters fault for not having consequence to their actions; it is everyone's fault for thinking someone else will make that person accountable.

It's not the bully's fault they express their emotions through anger and hate; it is every person who failed to ask them what they need to see life in a different perspective.

It's not the racist person fault that they say extremely oblivious comments; it is the responsibility of every person around who does know better to say something.

It's not that man's fault he failed to recognize or come talk to you, it is the fault of social stigmas repressing gender equality in all aspects of life.

It's not the woman's fault she felt like walking topless out in public, it is every uncalled-for word, action, or expression that she receives from people who don't understand self-restraint.

It's not the dogs fault it is a not wolf anymore; it is the fault of the human that we are not like the apes in anymore.

It's not the fault of the carefully considered, critical nature of becoming aware of your own ignorance; it is your fault for not choosing to do something about it.

Our ignorance and selfish conditioning will be our own undoing.