

LOUIS PAX

New Single: Spanish Rain - 04 Feb

Sweden's Louis Pax has shown us that life is an adventure, a bike ride leading to the party. But now they are here with a more somber message: the party always ends. Sometimes when you step outside, you suddenly realise what you've lost along the way.

As Louis Pax's new single Spanish Rain begins, the party vibe of their previous hits still echoes in your ears. But in this moment, Louis Pax captures the comedown moment brokenhearted winter cigarette in the small morning hours and the dejected car ride home in the wrong direction, where you finally understand that all that you thought you had and held, is now out of your grasp and beyond control.

But Louis Pax won't leave you there, because that moment will pass and light will prevail; it always does, without fail. The band stays true to themselves and their musical vision, as Spanish Rain leads out of the black verses and warms you through a shimmery chorus featuring the bold musical choice of horns.

Those horns are quite muted at first, but they will ultimately come to be a full voice along with the catchy chorus, lifting the melody and elevating us out of the despair as the song climaxes and brings us to the hopeful future.

We come out of the darkness, out of the rain, and back into the sun, wiser for what we've experienced. And, yes, ready for Louis Pax to lead us on our next adventure with them.
