The herbalists and crystal healers at Cascadia Crystals & Botanicals, Eatonville, WA are pleased to announce the addition to our staff of an accomplished world traveling Tarot authority and guide.

Cotton Davis is a Connecticut born direct Mayflower descendant who served in the Vietnam war as a Navy electronic and cryptographic technician. Thereafter, he amassed more than 50-years of experience utilizing his Tarot interpretive skills to traverse through his wide-ranging adventures from Haight Ashbury and Woodstock to his Northern European episode as an itinerant musician. Tarot divination proficiency then became paramount for navigating his exhilarating global business exploits during his pursuit of comparative religion studies while based in North Africa, Iran, Afghanistan, India and Australia. Specializing in two (2) disciplines,* he is an oracular adept and is regarded as a gifted, compassionate, empath...with extraordinary intuition and situational insight.

 The Oracle of Tarot

Each session features a pair of uniquely distinct, traditional, Celtic Tarot readings;

A. Specific Query (Outcome Question) B. General Current Positioning + Forecast

- A. An "Outcome Question" is ideally prepared beforehand by the client prior to commencement of the session. When utilizing the Seven (7) Card Celtic Tarot Spread, essentially, with all cards initially remaining faced down, these seven randomly drawn cards by the client are each positioned according to the numbered diagram (as presented on page 1 herein). The image on each card is then revealed, discussed and evaluated for key factors that collectively disclose the outcome (feasibility and achievability) of a desired righteous goal the client seeks to gain. Within the question, the client may wish to include an action strategy by which the outcome/goal is to be attained (see the formats for devising & constructing an Outcome Question – as exhibited on page 2 herein). The specific query may be held in confidence or shared with the Reader. In either case, it is imperative to commit the question to writing or voice recording (beforehand).
- B. A "General Positional Reading" is delivered – revealing the client's present psychological and external environmental conditions, and is augmented by future phase projections related to his/her evolving events. As catalyzed via the Nine (9) Card Celtic Spread, this reading spans the spectrum of "now."

The Seven (7) Card Celtic Tarot Spread

(Guide and Card Layout for Forecasting the Answer to an "Outcome Question")

In order to interpret the questioner's set of cards drawn from the deck, the Celts assigned a meaning to each card's position. The meaning of each placement is as follows:

- 1) The past that has brought things to the present
- 2) The present
- 3) The general future conditions (pertaining to the question)
- 4) The best policy to follow under the circumstances (specifically relating to the question)
- 5) The outside views...the opinion of others toward the situation (optional for consideration)
- 6) That which aids or hinders the outcome
- 7) The outcome (the forecasted result)...that which relates to the foundational question

* Prior to the session, carefully read and absorb the following directives:

- Upon composing a question, be sure to record it in writing or by utilizing a voice recorder.
- Formulate a question that focuses upon a particular goal or outcome you endeavor to attain/procure. For example; "What will be the outcome if I seek to achieve 'such and such' ?"
- With the question previously formulated and recorded, while keeping all cards upright (not upside down), begin shuffling (mixing up) the cards thoroughly. During the shuffling of the deck, it's best to concentrate solely upon the question you have composed. That is, shuffle your question into the cards.
- Upon deeming them to be sufficiently randomly mixed and infused with the question at hand, cut the cards by splitting up the deck into three (3) separate stacks. Then, in non-reverse order, reconstitute them into a single stack. Again, each card in the deck must be kept upright (no reversed cards).
- Begin laying out each of seven upright cards (face down) according to the order (1 through 7) as depicted in the diagrammatic pattern above.

With all cards dispensed in their proper positions (1 – 7), the interpretive procedure shall begin—turning each card over to progressively reveal details of the situation under question.

Additional Considerations to Aid the Formulation of the “Outcome Question”

The essential focus of an effective “outcome question” is the questioner’s chosen goal. This can take a myriad of forms, as can the applied means to attain it. Thus, the 7-Card Celtic Spread can provide the questioner with straightforward illumination of an auspicious outcome, or conversely, the card reading’s outcome may perhaps provide a timely forewarning that the envisioned objective entails impediments.

Examples of effectual “outcome questions” are as follows:

- a) “What will be the outcome if I apply for a position with (insert) corporation?” or;
- b) “What will be the outcome if I take a trip to Santa Barbara to survey the city’s Spiritualist Church.” or;
- c) “What will be the outcome for my son John’s ability to pay all his monthly bills if he continues to rely only upon his employment at (insert) company?”

* In addition, there are occasions when the client may wish to gain deeper perception and foreknowledge of the results of a previously established project or personal relationship – wherein the consequential results of that project or the new relationship have yet to materialize. By posing an “outcome question,” the Oracle of Tarot can provide the client with further guidance as to the emerging, behind-the-scenes, state of affairs stemming from such prior undertakings (that are still in the works).

In relation to creating the best possible “outcome question” for any Tarot reading (utilizing the 7-card Celtic spread), it is essential that the questioner recognize that there may well be one or more alternative measure(s) by which his/her righteous goal(s) may best be achieved. Perceiving and choosing such a well-conceived and effective “action step” and incorporating it into the question can be the key to successful implementation – obtaining the positive result the questioner is aiming for.

Put more succinctly, relative to the simplicity of the above example questions, a favorable, auspicious, outcome to the question may be assured upon inclusion of an alternatively chosen, augmenting, course of action reflected within a more thoroughly detailed question—thereby prompting the Tarot’s more fruitful disclosure of the route to success. Such a revised, in-depth, question can instill an effective means of revealing further detailed considerations of the matter, to enhance one’s ability to garner the desired outcome. With this in mind, in referencing the three (3) above example questions, instances of amended and more elaborate “outcome questions” may be fashioned as follows:

- a) “What will be the outcome if I seek to apply for a position with (insert name) corporation by first interacting with the upper management staff member (Supervisor Johnson) in order to win the job?” or;
- b) “What will be the outcome if I take my cousin’s advice and fly with his friend, (insert name) , to explore the Spiritualist Church in Santa Barbara?” or;
- c) “What will be the outcome for my son John’s ability to pay all his monthly bills if he continues to rely only upon his employment at (insert) company while attending college simultaneously, as he so wishes?”

These examples illustrate the truth of the old adage; “Your answer is only as good as your question.”

To elaborate further, the client should note that oracular Tarot card readings derived from such “outcome questions” are as instructive and helpful as the questions are comprehensive and precise.

Also, it must be reiterated that it is best to commit the question to writing or voice recording prior to commencement of the reading. Likewise, with the Reader’s assistance, it can be very instructive (in the long-term) to conclude the reading by recording the number and/or title of each card and its numbered position. In this regard, the Reader shall readily assist the client with said take-away documentation for further pondering and contemplation. Cell phone pictures of both spreads of cards are often taken – in order to adequately recall the reading. The client is also encouraged to make a voice recording of the entire session.

The Nine (9) Card Celtic Tarot Spread

(Guide and Card Layout for Assessing One's Overall General Circumstantial Situation)

To enable interpretive correlation of this spread's nine (9) images to the inquirer's circumstances, the Celts had assigned a specific meaning to each of the nine positions unto which each card is placed. After shuffling your situation into the cards and cutting the deck, begin the process of this reading by placing each card (face down) in the order of its numbered position, according to the diagrammatic pattern indicated below. Within the layout of this 9-Card "Positional Spread," the meaning of each card's placement is as follows:

- 1) A picture of the present
- 2) The highest that can be attained at this juncture
- 3) The hidden or unconscious factor(s) involved in present developments
- 4) The past (the element of the previous phase that has most influenced events unto the present)
- 5) The general future circumstantial condition

6)

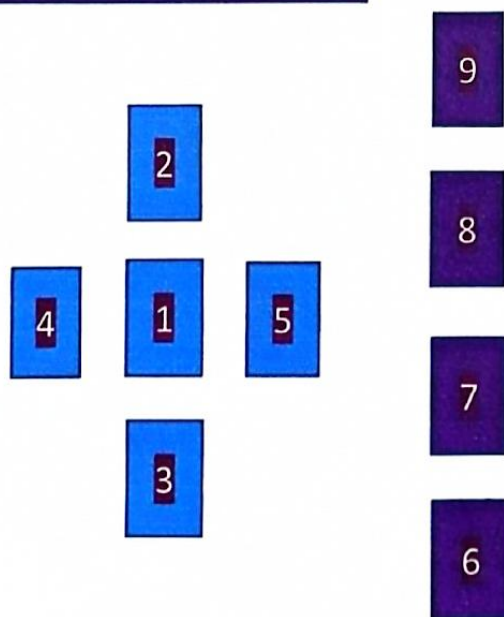

7)

8)

9)

Future Phase Projections

...These four (4) cards are depictions of evolving events that shall commence at a time close to the present, leading off into the future. These images represent situational affairs that are to emerge over the coming period of days, weeks or months, depending upon the frequency of intervals [phases] between Tarot consultations.

Terms, Policies, and Conditions of Service*

During the course of a session scheduled by Cascadia Crystals and Botanicals, should the client introduce the Reader to an issue of discussion that entails the client's involvement with current or future physical or psychological health related medical concerns...or in the event that the client acquaints the Reader with subject matter pertaining to current or potential legal actions, commitments, or disputes, etc., the client shall hereby and henceforth be entirely aware of the following foundational terms, policies, and conditions of service; *

1. While the Reader strives to provide the best possible suggestive support, the Reader cannot guarantee specific outcomes or assume responsibility for the client's decisions or the consequence(s) of said decisions.* This stipulation expressly applies to client decisions and resulting actions related to joint discussions with the Reader that has referenced the client's involvement with aforesaid health and/or legal matters, as well as the client's involvement with any other stated or implied situational issues discussed with the Reader.
