

Cabin Fever Quilt Along

Part 10: Putting It All Together

I took photos of my quilt on the design wall so that I could show you how the blocks divide up. It goes together in four sections, which I've illustrated in my (slightly blurry—sorry) photos.

The following pages show the breakdown of the four sections. When you've constructed all four sections, refer to the photo above. Sew Section 1 to Section 2; sew Section 3 to the previous unit. Finally, sew Section 4 to the other sections. Use your own judgment about pressing seams. If you've been pressing most of them open as you go, they should match easily. If you find side-pressed seams that don't nest, sometimes you can easily fix one of the seams. In worst case, you can clip the seam allowance and press it in the direction you need.
