FRANCISCO
“PANCHO” TOLEDO

On Sunday November 10th while enjoying a quiet evening at home with his family, Pancho suffered a debilitating stroke and spent 29 days in Theda Clark Stroke Unit. He has worked extremely hard to get back to life as he knew it before his stroke. As with any medical emergency his family has suffered the loss of his income and as bills continued to come in, his wife was also taken away from work to be with Pancho. Pancho and Bobbie have two children, daughter Alexis and son Elias, we want to help them all recover from this horrible experience and help them relieve some of the financial burden they have also suffered.

Racing junk has first row seat on ice speed record run By John Gunnell

My friend Dave Sarna is a racing enthusiast. It doesn't matter whether he's moving fast or slow or whether he's flying, driving, sailing or going fast on frozen water. In 2013, he dragged this Racing Junk contributor to the Bonneville Salt Flats to try to break 200 mph with a college-backed student racing team and a big-block Pontiac Firebird.

Dave broke the car, but four years later, he got into the 200 MPH Club. A week later, he drove my 2017 Oakland across the 406-mile Wisconsin section of The Yellowstone Trail to raise $8,500 for a camp for blind kids. The Oakland's top speed was about 40 mph and Dave said that it was scarier driving it than the Bonneville racer.

Dave has drag raced Camaros and ice raced snowmobiles. For the latter type of competition, he helps organize the annual Snodeo in Manawa, Wis. This event is called "The Best Show on Snow." A few weeks ago, Sarna invited Racing Junk to meet Kurt Anderson, a 60-year-old Orono, Minn. speed merchant who's aiming to set the World Speed Record on ice with his "Arctic Arrow" rocket racer at this year's Snodeo.

Anderson's goal is to better the current record of 247.93 mph that was set way back on Feb. 15, 1981 by the late "Slam'n Sammy" Miller at Lake George in New York. Anderson—a semi-retired Internet Services businessman—started his speed career by competing in the NHRA Heritage Drag Racing Series. Then, he started looking for faster rides and met Ky Michaelson, who introduced Anderson to rocket-powered race cars. Before long, Kurt and Ky headed to Aerospace salvage yards in California to get parts to create Anderson's current rocket-powered car. Kurt and a small team of fabricators built the Arctic Arrow for the single purpose of bettering the World Speed Record on Ice.

The shiny gold, 1,510-lb. rocket-powered snow machine was originally built in 1974 by Michaelson and was then modified by Anderson between 2014 and 2016. It is 25-ft. long, six inches wide up front and 72 inches wide at the rear. It gets its motivation from a 5000-lb. thrust HTP rocket motor. The Arctic Arrow's fuel system uses a pressurized 90 percent Hydrogen Peroxide mixture called HTP (high test peroxide) combined with DeZurik wafer valves. Ignition is achieved via a chemical reaction that occurs from converting Hydrogen Peroxide into water and oxygen (steam).

Anderson and Byron Nelson built the car's chassis and roll cage. The front suspension utilizes 1997 Yamaha V-Max snowmobile struts. The hard tail rear suspension is custom built. The Stiletto rack-and-pinion steering system provides a 15:1 turn ratio. The front independent suspension features 14-in. Drag Ski skis. Areoski MI500 skis are used in back. Stopping is accomplished with a pair of Simpson 12-in. Crossform drag chutes and a pneumatic ice claw.

The Arctic Arrow's safety features include a driver compartment built to SFI 2.3Q specifications, ISP roll cage padding, a 5-point impact harness, an EIS poured form seat, a HyBrid X head and neck restraint, a 3-point high-pressure safety relief system, primary and secondary fuel shut off systems and cockpit arming and disarming controls.

Crewing for the record attempt will be driver/owner Anderson, crew chief Ky Michaelson, assistant crew chief Curt Michaelson, fuel master Buddy Michaelson, chassis master Kevin O'Kelly, commander and chief Capt. Jack McClure, safety supervisor Ed Ballinger, logistics expert Steve Wagner and fuel/motor heating engineer Dan Swanson.

The World Record Speed Attempt will take place during the Snodeo (www.manawasnodeo.org) at Bear Lake Resort, in Manawa, Wis. For more information about the Arctic Arrow visit (<https://www.facebook.com/ArcticArrow/>).

It's official! Registration for the 10th Annual Sturgeon Shuffle on Saturday, April 25, 2020, is now open! We are especially excited that both the 5K and 10K courses return to their origin on County Highway X just west of New London which will be closed to traffic during our events. The courses run parallel to the scenic Wolf River during the time of the year that historically sees the unique "running" of the sturgeon. Visit our website for more info and to register.

Dee Chancellor shared an event.

Saturday at 6:13 PM

Hello Manawa, Hope you are doing well this evening. As some of you may know we will be holding a food truck rally at Lindsay Park in June. We are still looking for vendors for this event so if you or someone you may know would like to be apart please PM and I can get you the information. <https://facebook.com/events/s/manawas-1st-annual-food-truck-/385587962135070/?ti=as>
