Therapy Pricing Updates - What's Changing?

From July 2025, the NDIA will introduce new Pricing Arrangements and Limits for therapies and supports.

In brief:

- Some therapy rates will decrease; psychology rates will rise in some states.
- Provider travel is now capped at 15 minutes.
- Sessions can be billed in 10-minute increments for more flexibility.
- Support worker rates increase with CPI.
- Plan Management setup fees removed.

These changes aim to make NDIS pricing fairer and easier to understand. Good news: your plan will update automatically, so you don't need to do anything.

Supporting Young Futures

The NDIA is helping young people with disability build skills and confidence for work through its School Leaver Employment Supports program.

Between July 2023 and June 2024, over 7,300 school leavers received employment assistance. Of the 2,165 who finished their programs:

- 12% went on to further study or volunteer work
- 22% achieved open employment
- 4% gained supported employment

Young people who took part in skill training, job customization, and real-world work experience were the most likely to find paid work. It's proof that the right opportunities and encouragement can open doors to independence and success!

Wayne Tynan: Turning Adversity into Purpose

After a life-changing stroke, the GDSS CEO rebuilt his life – and founded an organization to help others do the same.

Three years ago, Wayne Tynan's life changed in an instant when he suffered a stroke. What began as just another day at the office ended up with months in the hospital and one of the most challenging periods of his life became the start of a powerful journey of recovery, resilience, and purpose. At first, the road ahead seemed daunting, Wayne faced physical limitations and emotional uncertainty. It was a dark time, in the early days, even the simplest tasks felt impossible. Wayne faced the frightening reality of having to learn to walk and talk again, often feeling overwhelmed by anxiety and frustration. Each day there was a battle between exhaustion and determination – but through it all, he refused to give up and with courage and determination, he took the first steps toward rebuilding his life. Supported by his husband Almario, close friends, and an incredible rehabilitation team, Wayne gradually regained his strength and confidence.

“Even in your darkest moments, there’s always a glimmer of light.” – Wayne Tynan

“Getting up and going out is very important – even if you don’t feel like it,” Wayne reflects.

Through this process, Wayne discovered the importance of community, connection, and compassion, his recovery also sparked a transformation in his lifestyle. Motivated to take control of his health, Wayne committed to making lasting changes – including losing more than 50 kilograms and adopting a balanced, active routine, he often jokes that his journey could make a great TV makeover story, but behind the humour lies a deep sense of pride in what he’s achieved.

“The most important thing is having someone who will listen,” he says.

Inspired by his experience, Wayne founded Global Disability Support Services (GDSS) an organisation built on understanding, inclusion, and compassion. His vision was simple but powerful: to ensure that others facing challenges receive the same kind of care and encouragement that helped him rebuild his life. Under his leadership, GDSS has grown into a place where people feel seen, supported, and empowered to reach their goals. Wayne’s lived experience gives him a unique perspective as a CEO – one grounded in empathy, authenticity, and genuine connection.

“Having a disability doesn’t change who you are – it’s about embracing a new version of you,” Wayne says.

Wayne’s journey reminds us that every setback can become a new beginning. His story is not only one of recovery, but of rediscovery – proof that strength, kindness, and perseverance can turn even the hardest moments into a source of hope and inspiration.
