Tinder Quik Fire Starting Tabs.

Start a fire in minutes, even in cold, wet and windy conditions. Waterproof and windproof. Fast ignition. 1-2 minutes of burn time, which will give you plenty of time to get a fire going. Ignites with a single spark or flame.

They are specially treated to ensure the cotton remains waterproof. In addition, the tabs can be used directionally, unlike tinder powders, gels or even tinder cubes. As a result, you can light the tabs and then light several prepared areas more easily. Lights when wet - stays lit in all weather. Perfect complement to the NDuR Fire Steel and Striker as an aid to get your fire going in less than perfect conditions. Hang packaged.

Can Opener.

All stainless construction. Useful in survival kits. Bag of 100. Pocket-sized and consists of a short metal blade that serves as a handle (and doubles as a flat-blade screwdriver), with a small, hinged metal tooth that folds out to pierce the can lid. A notch just under the hinge point keeps the opener hooked around the rim of the can as the device is "walked" around to cut the lid out. The tiny, lightweight, P-38 (38mm in length) collapsible can opener was developed during World War II, reported to have been a rapid 30 days design project in the summer of 1942 by the U.S. Army Subsistence Research Laboratory in Chicago, IL. The origin of the name is not clear. Some claim it required exactly 38 punctures around a can to open it. Others say it performed with the speed of a P-38 fighter plane. Whatever the case, it is clear this little device has to be considered one of the most perfect inventions ever designed for use in combat. The P-51 (51mm in length) is the big brother to the P-38 Can Opener. It was designed in the 1980s as the big brother to open #10 cans and the large 36 soldier meal pack or T-Packs. About twice the size of the P-38 but about twice as easy to use due to it's larger handle. Bulk poly bagged.
