Research Assistant Opportunity

- The Khoshbouei Lab here at UF is looking for an undergrad research assistant!
 - Little bit about the lab:
 - They study the dopamine transporter (DAT) and how it regulates biological responses, especially in the context of diseases associated with disrupted dopamine signaling, like addiction and Parkinson's Disease.
 - Little bit about the project you would be helping with:
 - You would be working with Dr. Jordan Seibold (post-doc) and her project investigates the relationship between Parkinson's disease (PD) and the immune system, focusing on a brain-spleen connection. This study was inspired by recent evidence suggesting immune system dysfunction plays a role in PD pathogenesis.
 - LINK to their website (Dr. Seibold is new to the lab and isn't on their website yet)
 - LINK to a google doc with more info
 - If interested please send an email to jordan.seibold@ufl.edu with your resume/ CV attached
