BIOGRAPHY

With a combined 30 years of experience in film and television, Laurie is an accomplished senior producer in Vancouver's television market.

After a successful career producing for the top production companies in Vancouver, in 2021, Laurie partnered with long-time colleague Deborah Wainwright to establish Lake Tide Media. Together they have developed several projects to drive social awareness, and have produced two successful one-hour documentaries for CBC's Passionate Eye "Across and Down" and "Deoppelgangers: Face to Face." Prior to Lake Tide, Case held the reigns as series producer on the highly anticipated 4 part series for CBC "The Oland Murder," and spent time on-staff as Senior VP of Force Four Entertainment overseeing their Vancouver production slate. Case was at the helm of the ratings hits for Corus and Netflix "Border Security: America's Front Line" for three seasons, and "Border Security: Canada's Front Line" for three seasons. Over the years Case has earned an impressive and diverse range of credits in a variety of rolls. Whether producing from the field, cutting in the edit chair or supervising in the production office, Laurie has always had a keen sense of story and production strategy. Her experience, skill set and knowledge in every aspect of production allow her to lead teams with confidence and provide critical oversight to the production.

Laurie played key roles on critically acclaimed documentaries such as The Wild Horse Redemption (CBC/TIFF selection), and The Suicide Tourist (CTV/Gemini winner), but perhaps her most rewarding work has come from 20+ years of producing, writing and co-directing films for the New Westminster based organization Hope International Development Agency. Together with a small team of professionals who volunteer their time, they have created breathtaking and emotional films all over the world to raise millions of dollars for the poor.

When not making television, Laurie is a mom, wife, avid skier and softball player.
