	Analysis of Shu Ha Ri in Karate-do — When a Fighting Art Becomes a Fine Art (COMING in spring 2025) Description: The fine arts principle Shuhari was added to karate-do as an invented tradition when Japan altered an Okinawan self-defense art into fine-art-like self-perfection. Historical, cultural, political, philosophical, psycho-logical, and commercial views yield an analysis that answers those questions about ascent or alibi, which inevitably arise when an Okinawan fighting art is changed into a Japanese fine art. (.....) 	Analysis of Genuine Karate 2 — Social-Cultural Development, Commercialization, and Loss of Essential Knowledge (2023) Description: Explaining and documenting the major differences between karate-jutsu, karate-do, and sports-karate corrects today's unspecified use of the term “karate”, that suggests unlike versions being alike. The analysis highlights how Japanized karate-do was used for prewar militarization; how it was industrialized into a world-wide sports-karate inflation; and how all that ruined the art’s classic knowledge base. (.....) 	Analysis of Genuine Karate — Misconceptions, Origin, Development, and True Purpose (2021) Description: Scientific analysis and public records reveal the complex evolution of karate and unsettled claims upon it by various stake-holders. It is studied how mainland Japan re-interpreted the classic Okinawan self-protection art into its own karate-do styles of self-perfection and sports; how American impacts altered the art in the West; and how the laws of physics prove Okinawan karate’s fighting superiority. (.....)
