The American Dream takes on many meanings. To many Americans the American Dream means to own the car of their dreams. Whether you grew up wanting a 1979 Ferrari 308 GTS, a '66 Mustang, or even a monster truck, every American has had a desire for the car of their dreams at some point in their life.

North Texas is home to millions of people and their dream cars can be seen around every corner. Texans are proud and love to show off their rides.

Everywhere you go across North Texas you can see examples of Americans living the dream with their dream cars. Everything from a Porsche 911 to a 1995 F150 4X4 with a 6 inch lift. The beauty of a dream car is that it's different for every person. Some want a dream car that draws attention when driving down the road and others may want a car based on performance and the roar of the exhaust while cruising down the open country roads.

Some people seek out their dream cars their whole life. Spending years saving and working 70 hours a week just to buy that '69 GTO they fell in love with in high school. Others may be fortunate enough to have their dream cars handed down to them from their parents or grandparents who owned a '57 T-Bird. Many more may be unable to achieve their dreams and settle for a different car and never own their dream car.

A dream car can be anything you want it to be. The key word being "dream". The greatest thrill of pursuing your dream car may be the chase itself. Dreaming, looking at pictures, admiring it on the road, and talking about it with friends may actually be the best part about the dream car. Not all dreams come true but sometimes dreaming about that certain car may be a greater experience than actually owning the car.

Whether you own your dream car or are still trying to fulfill that dream, keep the dream alive and enjoy the experience. Living the American Dream means that the possibility of owning your dream car is all up to you. A dream car can be whatever you make of it.
