It is normal to comb out some debris for a few days following an appointment. A few nits or dead lice found within the first three days after treatment does not warrant a return trip. The details will be explained completely after treatment.

Comb Care

Take comb and place under warm running water with the teeth facing down, take finger and run it across teeth releasing any nits or lice trapped in comb. After comb is completely clean and treatment is completed you can sterilize comb by placing it container and pouring boiling water in it. Allow to soak until water turns cool. Remove and air dry.

To prevent damage of comb DO NOT put comb in pan of boiling water!

Remember moving forward the best offense with lice is a strong defense.
