THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

I work at a store manned by grumpy old men. One day a ray of light showed up in the form of a cheerful young customer. She was chatty and charming and left the store gushing. How lucky we are to be alive! She announced before the door closed. "Wow!" She was certainly jovial," I remarked to a co-worker. "Yeah," he agreed, "I didn't like her either!"

I was checking out a job website when I found a gig that left me wondering, how tough can it be. "Morgue assistant. Job requirements: excellent customer service skills!"

We invite grandparents to a special day at our school, culminating in a photo op with grandparent and grandchild posing in front of a colorful display from a history class. Only after the last shot was snapped did we notice what appeared above each grandparent's head; a banner screaming, "Discover the ancient world!"

After months of fruitless searching, I ran across a job in the want ads that I knew I was qualified for. The posting read: "position may be filled by male or female only!"

The best thing you could say about one job candidate was that she was honest. Her resume stated, "I was entrusted to ruin our office in our partner's absence."

The length of the red light you are stopped at is directly proportional to how quickly you need to get where you are going!

Putting an item in a safe place guarantees you won't be able to find it when you need it. AND when you do find the item, it's usually three days after you needed it and are now looking for something else!

A mother's bachelor son invited her over for a meal. He had just gotten 2 new dogs and wanted his mom to see them. When she sat down at the table, she noticed that the dishes were the dirtiest that she had ever seen in her life. "Have these dishes ever been washed" she asked, running her fingers over it? "They are as clean as soap and water could get them", he answered. She felt a bit apprehensive but started eating anyway. The food was really delicious and she said so, despite the dirty dishes. When dinner was over her son took the dishes put them on the floor and whistled and yelled, "Here Soap, here Water."

Going with a prisoner to the local hospital to have blood work done was too much for me; I fainted as the needle was inserted into his arm. I was out for only a second, but it was long enough for the inmate to become concerned for my well-being. "You know," he said, "If you take the cuffs off me, I can drive us back to the prison."

Hard work spotlights the character of people: some turn up their sleeves, some turned up their noses, and some don't turn up at all!"

Recently one of the guys at the warehouse called my husband, the general manager, to tell him that he wouldn't be in that day. I'm having my autopsy," he said, "but with any luck I'll be in tomorrow."

Who says companies only care about the bottom line? Ours is socially conscious and offers employees fun outdoor activities throughout the complex. Both of these admirable elements were driven home one day when a voice over the loudspeaker boomed, "Everyone who signed up to donate blood, please report to the rifle range."

Customer: "Can I please get your name and position with the company?"

Employee: This is Ryan, and I am sitting down."

When you've got a long list of things to buy at a department store, you tend to tune out announcements like "All cashiers to the front register" or "Associate pick up line 3." But one did catch my attention: "Customer service needed in men's boxers".

Procrastination is totally a good thing. You always have something to do tomorrow, plus you have nothing to do today.
