Catnip Crazy!

According to our friends in The Feline Health Center at Cornell College of Veterinary Medicine,

- * 50-80% of cats possess the catnip loving gene.
- * Rubbing or crushing dried catnip in your hands will release the nepetalactone, which will garner maximum effect.
- * Kittens under 6 months rarely respond and older cats often don't care.
- * A half teaspoon of dried loose catnip is plenty. Use it as a treat, so that it remains special.

WHERE IS EVERYONE GOING?

Ah...the downfall of being in a college town. We must bid goodbye to our clients who are part of the academic world and have received their assignments elsewhere. We are losing SO MANY! Farewell!

- * My baby Eponine (and her cousins Toby and Lily) are off to Atlanta (or CATlanta, as they like to tell Eponine).
- * My boy Remi is off to Harrisburg - we will miss him so! He has so many changes!
- * Our tree climbing Baxter went off to Huntsville and is having fun.
- * And our buddy Lemmy is traveling with his mom!

We will miss everyone and expect photos!
