Opinion: Sorry, Biden's Pardons Are Much Worse Than Trump's

Democrats have resorted to pardons because they appear to expect lawfare to continue. Both President Trump and Attorney General-designate Pam Bondi are positioned to stop the lawfare, but only if the Democrats renounce their politicization of criminal justice. Lawfare can descend on Democrats as easily as on Republicans. To learn more, visit <https://www.newsweek.com/sorry-bidens-pardons-are-much-worse-trumps-opinion-2018843>

Senate Votes on Trump's Cabinet Nominees: Tracking Everyone Who Has Been Confirmed So Far

President Trump's government is beginning to take form, but he's still waiting for a few key players to join the team. A large number of government positions require the U.S. Senate's approval, including every Cabinet Secretary and other Cabinet level officials. The confirmation process can take several weeks, as nominees are put to a vote one by one. Follow along as People tracks the major nominees' progress.
